WRESTLERS ARE PEOPLE TOO

Did you ever sit back and think about what really makes up a wrestler's day? Sure, when you get the arena, you see all the glitter and hype that goes into putting on great show, but there's a lot of hard work that goes into giving the fans the best. A typical day in the life of your average wrestler goes something like this: wake up, eat a light breakfast, get to the gym for an intensive work out, grab a light bite, catch an airline flight or begin the drive to get to the next show, hit the gym again upon arrival for another intensive work out, wrestle, and finally collapse in bed.

Remember, wrestlers are people also, but unlike most, the schedules they follow can be quite rigorous. The travel alone is enough to drain the average joe, but unlike us, wrestlers can't rest f rom jet lag, they have to get in the ring and put their all into their match. Yeah sure, there's glitz and glamour, but there's also some very hard work involved. So fans remember, if the next time you see your favorite wrestler and he or she is not as cheerful or pesonable as you would like, cut them a break. Remember, they are human, too and just may be tired, but they still appreciate your support.

Keep it in the ring,

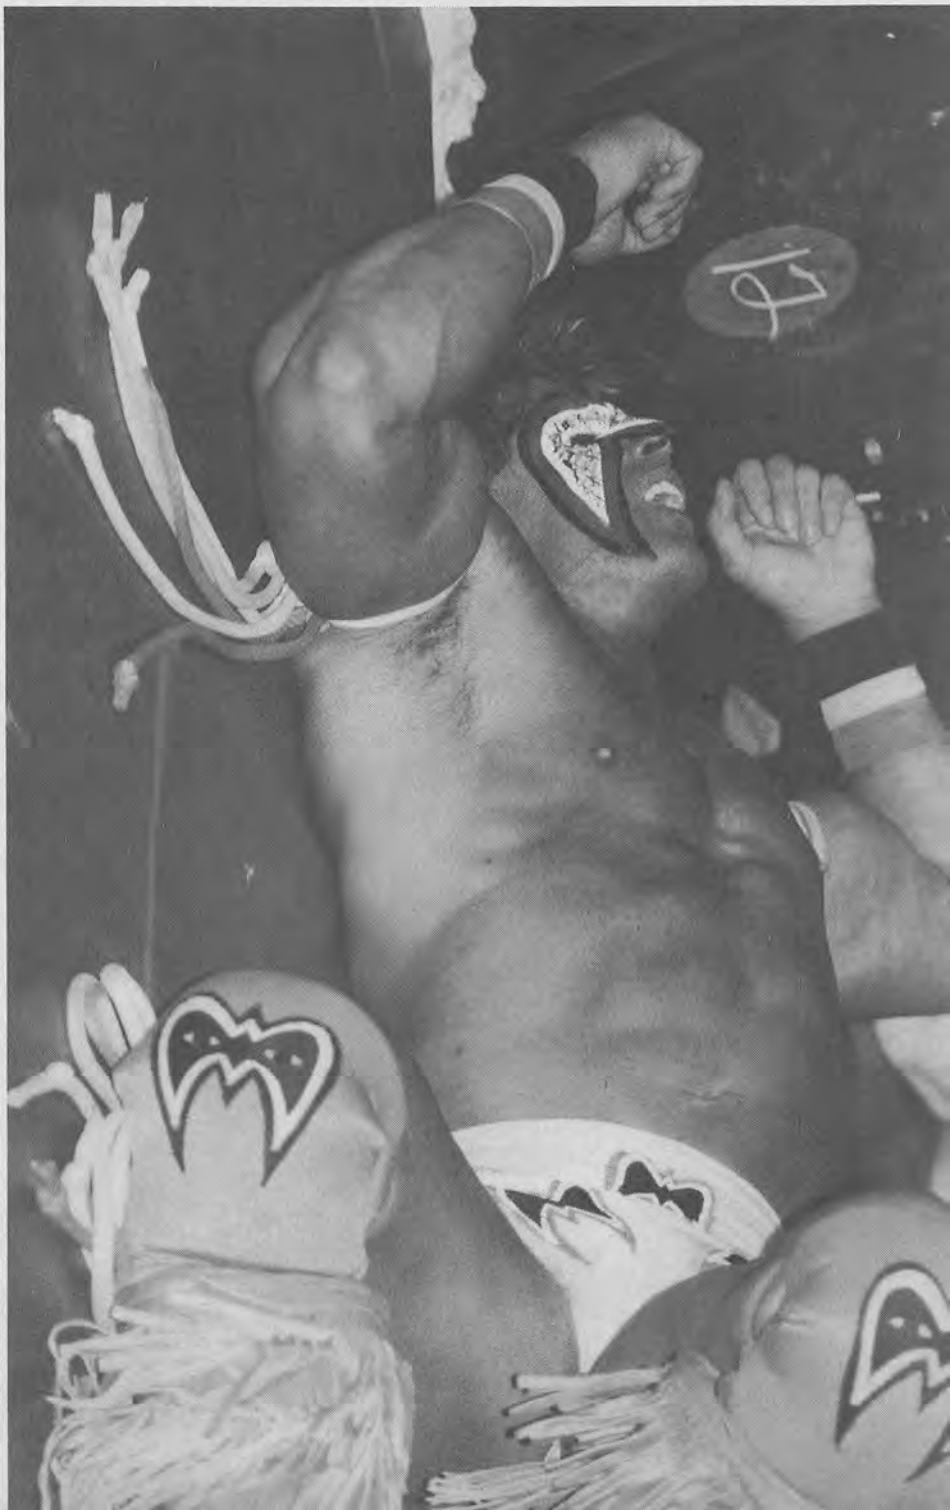
HULK HOGAN VS THE ULTIMATE WARRIOR

Listen up Vince McMahon,Jr. - give the fans what they want. The main event on last April 1, 1990's WrestleMania 6 where The Ultimate Warrior had the championship torch passed on to him when he defeated Hulk Hogan is worth a second look. When both men clashed for the first time one-on-one, their performances greatly surprised the public. Hey, these two guys were exciting to watch when properly motivated! With all the accolades that have come the Warrior's way since that historic match, coupled with the inconsistent behavior of the Hulkster, after being injured by The Earthquake and then spending a lot of time in Hollywood, there are several questions that need answers. Was the first match's ending a fluke, is Hogan washed-up, who is the real American wrestling hero the public will give total support to? You have the power, Mr, McMahon, let's get the show on the road, literally. Followers of the World Wrestling Federation need something to capture their enthusiasm again.

The quicker the Warrior and Hogan finally get all the details squared away for the re-match, the more at ease the wrestling community will be. The fans demand it and the wrestlers involved have to be salivating over the prospects of an incredible box-office pay day. Both men are clearly the sport's two most recognizable participants. Even non-wrestling enthusiasts know of them. When these two meet in the ring, people will watch and listen.

Even with all that he continues to accomplish in the ring, to many fans the title belt around the Warrior's waist seems somewhat out of place. Let's face it, following in the Hulk's footsteps is difficult at best. It's going to take time in getting used to a different champion. However, indications are that his title reign may come to an end earlier than most originally predicted, even though the Hulkster is involved in many non-wrestling activities at this time. There is no way that the Hulk is going to settle for being unofficially recognized by the WWF as the number two heavyweight; he has exhibited far too much pride for that. As for the championship belt, it is secondary in this situation for him. Upon recapturing the strap, it would just be yet another trophy that would eventually be crammed into his showcase. The wrestling world still addresses him as "champ". His moments in the ring keep getting greater, and don't think the Warrior isn't aware of that. Since defeating The Iron Sheik for the WWF title on January 23, 1984, then winning the championship for a second time at the expense of Randy Savage on April 2, 1989, nothing seems impossible for the Hulkster to tackle. With his best friend Brutus "The Barber" Beefcake recovering from a serious boating accident, Hogan has gained even more momentum in his quest to win the heavyweight title for a third time. The Ultimate Warrior is equally anxious for a second meeting between him and Hogan to come off. He is leading the negotiations towards a showdown on March 24, 1991 in the Los Angeles Coliseum, host of WrestleMania 7. There's no doubt that he and the Hulk can attract a capacity house of more than 100,000 spectators. It's clear that The Ultimate Warrior wants to prove he's a superior wrestler to Hulk Hogan but that's easier said than done. No man has put the Hulkster down for a pin on two consecutive meetings since he returned to the WWF in 1983.

The Ultimate Warrior has been known to get himself out of sticky situations.



THE MATCH THE FANS DEMAND!!

Taking all the perceived public pressure in stride, the Warrior hasn't changed his workout schedule. He continues to push his body physically beyond points previously thought unattainable in the weight rooms. Oh, he and Hogan are charismatic but the Warrior's physique is second to none in wrestling today. Handling the less than total recognition by the fans as the top draw in the WWF, even with possession of the title belt, is something The Ultimate Warrior is doing as well as can be expected.

Doing all that can be asked and expected of him, the Warrior who also once held the WWF's Inter-Continental laurels, has been soundly defeating such illustrious opponents like "Ravishing" Rick Rude. Rude was well aware that he was going up against the closest person in the sport to being Superman and trained harder than normal for the Warrior. For his efforts, Rick ended up with a torn tricep muscle last June. With Rude out of commission, Heenan sent in Haku to pick up the slack in handicapped matches. The Warrior didn't even break a sweat. This is one man who needs serious competitors in order to work to his maximum potential.

When comparing the two WWF superstars, neither Hogan nor the Warrior can brag of a scientific repertoire. Delivering stiff clotheslines, and legdrops are as technical as they get but it is all the holds that either has needed to resort to. In the Warrior's case, he lifts men high above his head then sends them down falling flat on their face. To end their misery, the Warrior comes bouncing off the ring ropes to transform into a flying splash, landing squarely onto their backs. Since wrestling is all that he does, there is growing belief that The Ultimate Warrior is now more dedicated to the sport than Hogan. Even the former champ's supporters say the Hulkster needs to be hungry to win the big match again. After all it hasn't taken the Warrior long to get used to all the luxuries that come the way of the champ.

Rick Rude continues to occupy most of the Warrior's ring time. Rude firmly believes that magic can happen, just like it did on April 2, 1989. On that fateful day, with the ringside assistance of Bobby Heenan, Rude captured the InterContinental belt from the Warrior. But alas, his time in the spotlight didn't last long. The Ultimate Warrior quickly regained that belt. He knows what its like to be a strapholder for quite a while now, and the Warrior will fight with all his might to keep anyone from stripping him of his gold.

As other national promoters try diligently to come across as first class to wrestling fans, the fact of the matter remains, Hogan and the Warrior are all that really count. Two weeks after WrestleMania 6, both men took their talents to Japan and in the Tokyo Egg Dome before 41,000 people on April 20, 1990, they came out on top of some veteran opponents. As most observers conclude, the Hulk had his best ring performance in the past half dozen years when he engaged in what turned out to be a blood bath against Stan Hansen. Pinning Hansen made international wrestling headlines. As for the Warrior whipping Ted DiBiase in the co-main event of the "Wrestling Summit" card, it was the first opportunity for the Japanese to see the new champ up close. They seemed unsure of how to react but were speechless when witnessing his energetic but radical attitude

March 24, 1991 should be judgment day for both Hulk Hogan and The Ultimate Warrior. First Japan, then Canada had the big match, now it's America's turn to get the Super Bowl of wrestling match ups. Go on McMahon, the fans double dare you to make the move and pit Hogan against the Warrior. Lock them in a cage if you must. Good luck fellows and may the best man survive.

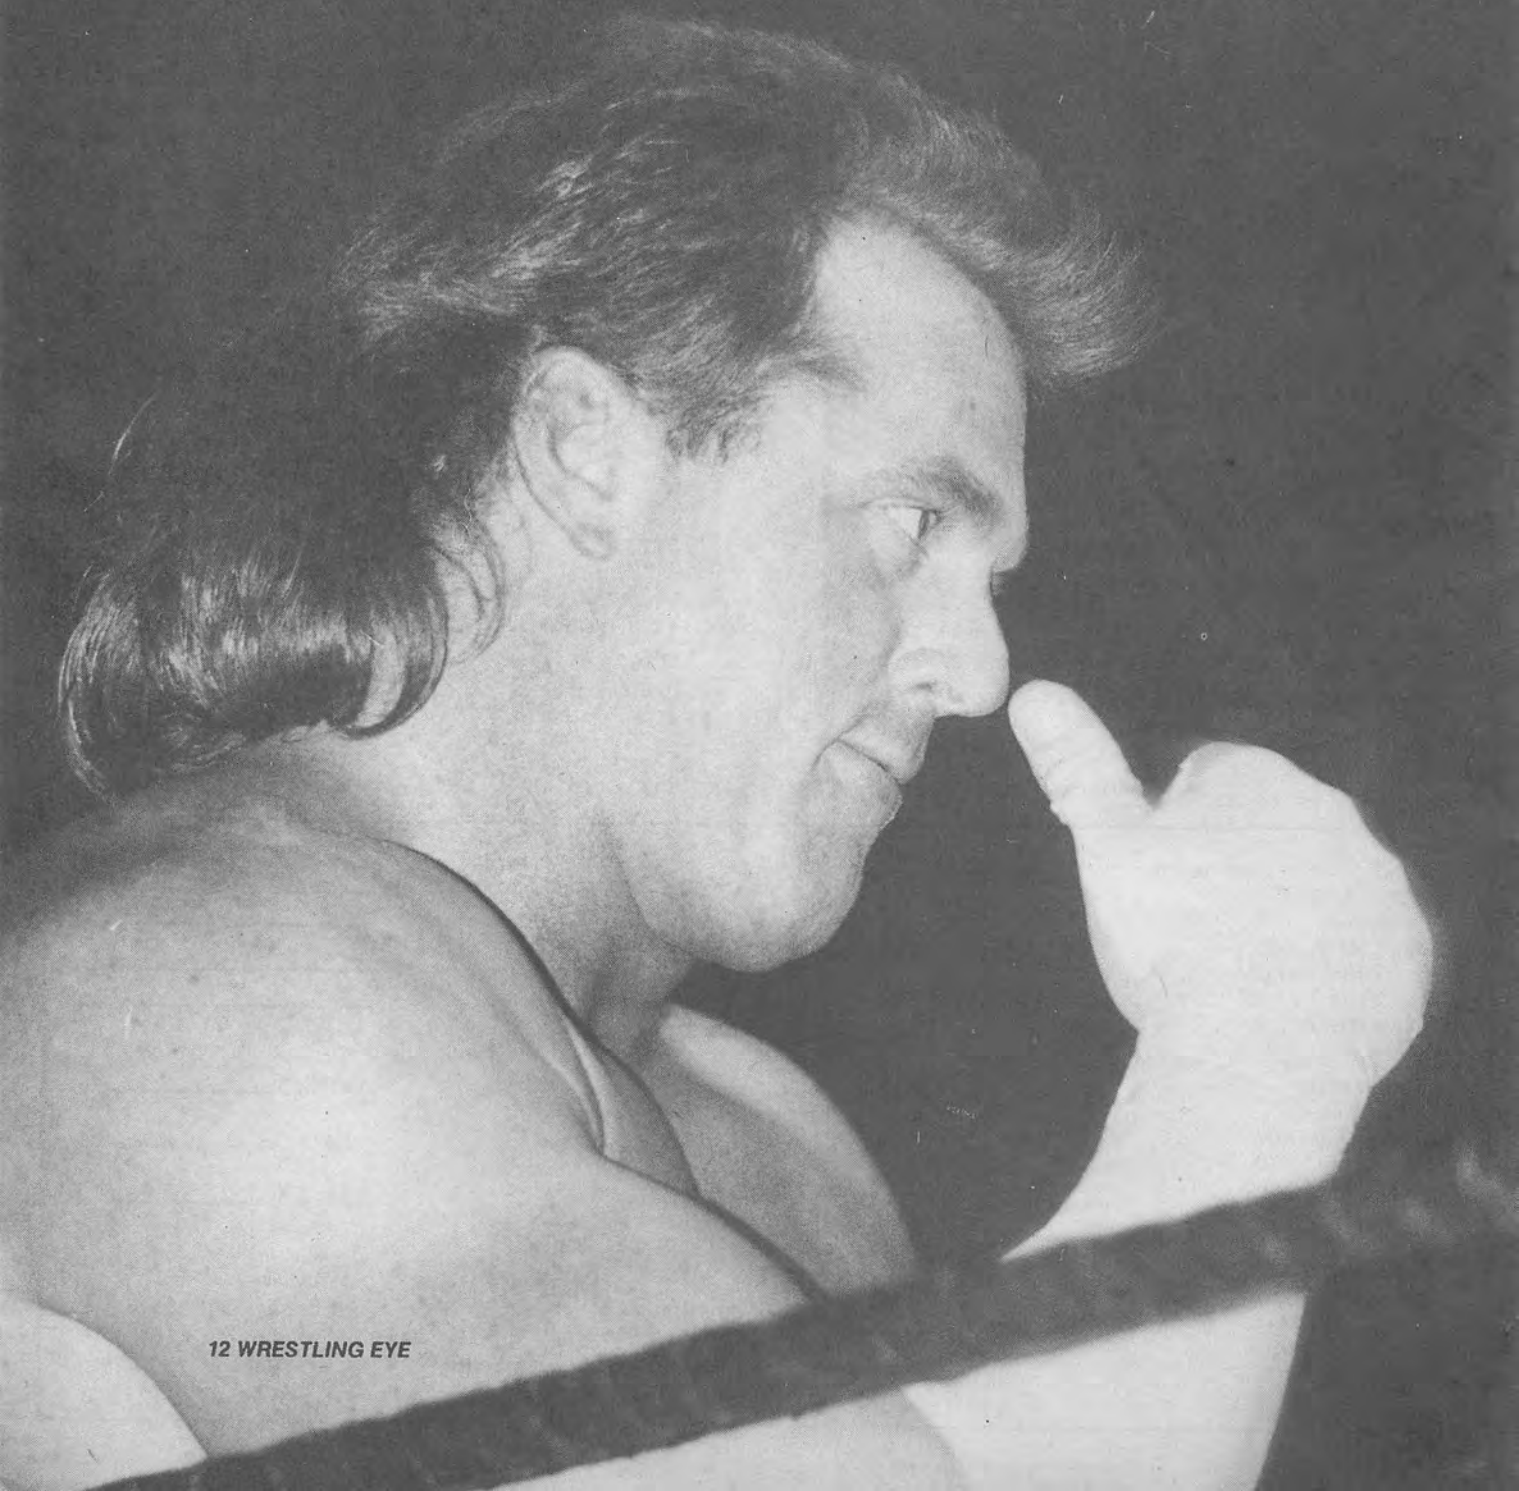
CAN HE BEAT THE ODDS?

BY STEVE MUELLER PHOTOS BY DELUCA

Beefcake always thumbed his nose at danger.



C'mon Beefcake, we're all pulling for you!

Is there really such a thing in pro wrestling as the FOURTH OF JULY CURSE? Is there really some dark and sinister force operative in the wrestling world, a tragedy tosser that strikes with sudden fierceness on the Fourth of July like a sneak aerial attack? On the surface, such a proposition seems preposterous.And yet when the events of July 4, 1990, and of recent Fourth of July holiday periods are considered, the absurd seems possible.

Over the Fourth of July weekend in 1988, Adrian Adonis, Pat Kelly and Dave McKigney lost their lives while travelling to Newfoundland for a series of matches. The car in which they were traveling skidded off a winding mountain road.

In 1989, some wrestlers working for Stampede Wrestling were on their way to a house show when their van collided head-on with an oncoming vehicle. Davey Boy Smith was thrown through the windshield and was the most seriously injured. He cracked a vertabrae in his neck and needed over a hundred stitches to close his wounds. Jason the Terrible (Karl Moffat) broke his leg in two places, an injury from which he still has not fully recovered. Also injured in the crash were Chris Benoit, Sumu Hara, and Ross Hart. This year, tragedy struck Brutus "the Barber" Beefcake.

It was the kind of lovely summer day that Floridians like to brag about. Sunshine glittered off the sand on the crowded Tampa beach where Brutus Beefcake was enjoying a rare day off from the grinding WWF travel schedule. He and some friends, including WWF wrestler Jim Brunzell, planned to spend the day para-sailing. Para-sailing, an immensely popular new water sport, is essentially aerial-water skiing. The para-sailer is strapped into a parachute and then is propelled into the air as the towing boat builds speed. It is said by those who have tried it that the sensation experienced while para-sailing is as close to natural flying as man can get without sprouting wings.

Brutus Beefcake was in the boat holding the towing rope when something blurred his vision. At that same moment, as the para-sailer was lifting off the water, travelling at an estimated speed of thirty miles an hour, the towing rope snapped.Beefcake, temporarily blinded and unable to move, was struck in the face by the para-sailer's knees.The impact broke Beefcake's jaw, nose, cheekbones and two bones near the eye. The knees of the para-sailer were severely damaged.

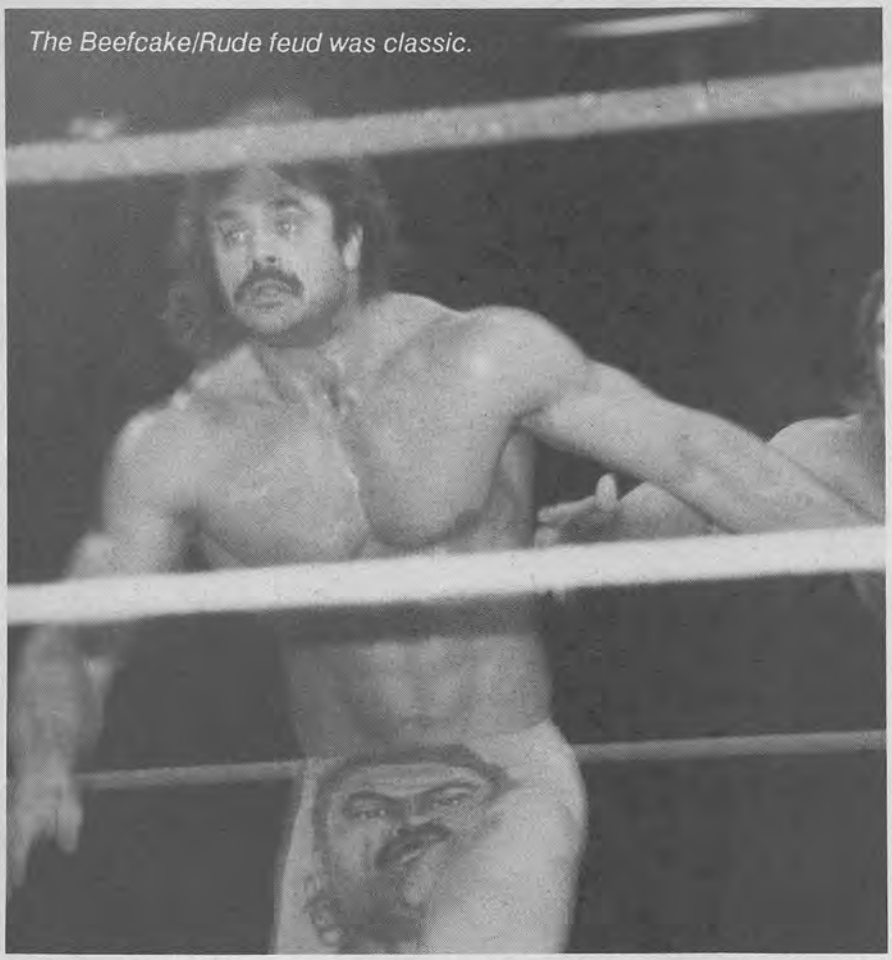
Beefcake was rushed to the hospital where reconstructive surgery began immediately and a tracheotomy was administered to allow him to breathe. Bone from his hip was used to reconstruct his face.Twelve plates were inserted in his skull. After the operations were completed, doctors said Beefcake would need eighteen months to two years to recover from the injuries and there was no chance that he could ever return to the ring. However, displaying what doctors have termed "amazing recuperative powers and unbelievable courage and determination," Beefcake has already begun to make a startling recovery from the frightening injury. Beefcake was released from the hospital on July 16. On July 17, he started training in the gym for a return to the ring. Now doctors are saying that he may be fully recovered in nine months.

Perhaps as frightening as the accident was Titan Sport's treatment of it. Vinceland has never been noted for handling "hard news" honestly. In fact, Titan appears oblivious to the existence of a world beyond the immediate range of their television cameras. The promotion, as a matter of policy, rarely releases any accurate information about illnesses or injuries suffered by its current or former wrestlers. In fact, the tragic death of Adrian Adonis has yet to be acknowledged. Recent injuries suffered by Rick Martel and Shawn Michaels were also not reported.

Titan Sports, in general, once again demonstrated callous indifference in its reprehensible treatment of Beefcake's terrible accident. The accident was acknowledged only in passing by McMahon who called it "a boating mishap of some sort." The WWF continued to advertise Beefcake for future cards while he was lying in a hospital bed in what doctors termed "unbelievable and devastating pain." Perhaps the most sardonic act committed by America's premiere wrestling promotion was the removal, without explanation, of the Beefcake doll from the WWF merchandise display desk on the set of "Prime Time Wrestling". Suddenly it seemed, Brutus Beefcake never existed even though, until the moment of the accident, he had been an integral part of the WWF's overall promotional thrust. This behavior can only be termed despicable.

Let's hope Brutus is back in shape again real soon.



The Beefcake/Rude feud was classic.

Most wrestling insiders believe that, because of his unusual courage and determination, the Barber will definitely return to the ring. Now these insiders are wondering about something else. Will the Fourth of July Curse strike someone in 1991? And if it does, because of the insensitivity to tragedy that seems to be part of its overall company philosophy, will Titan Sports try to turn the Curse into a new yearly promotional event? "Curseamania Is Coming."

There's only one Brutus Beefcake.

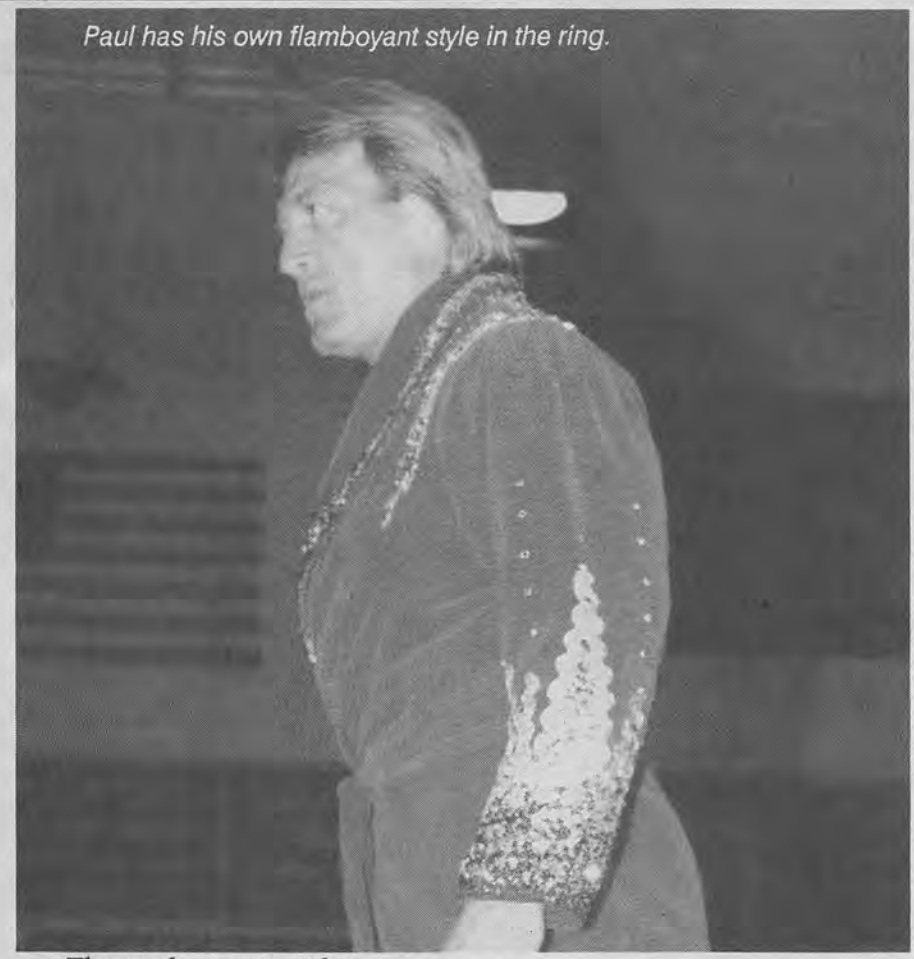
PAUL ORNDORFF



Paul has his own flamboyant style in the ring.

The man has proven to have more lives than a cat. Countless times the rumor mill has been working overtime concerning the wrestling career of Paul "Mr. Wonderful" Orndorff. From the most extreme story that he had died, to his having a crippling back injury, you name the illness and somewhere, someone has connected it with "Mr. Wonderful". Well, forget all the misleading statements. He is wrestling today in the same superb fashion as he did ten years ago while with Georgia Championship Wrestling and later for the World Wrestling Federation. In most recent times, he was a member of the National Wrestling Alliance, and he currently sees action in the independent rings. What a joy it has been to once again be able to see a first class athlete perform throughout the United States. Paul Orndorff is a man taking great pride in doing what he does best, and being able to set his own schedule at the same time. Who ever said that in life you can't have it all?!

No, Orndorff has never held the NWA or WWF championship belts but that's inconsequential when considering he's as much a celebrity as the title holders and feared by challengers just the same. After an extended layoff from active participation in the ring for two years, 1990 marked Paul's full-time return to the ring. When he joined the NWA last Spring, there was no noticeable difference in his ring performance. So why, with everything going for him, did "Mr. Wonderful" leave the NWA? Most athletes retire when they physically can't do what their mind wants them to. Well, that's certainly not the case for Paul Orndorff.

There have been no nagging injuries reported concerning him and all personal and professional relationships have been harmonious with his fellow grapplers. The allegiance Paul formed with Sting, The Junk Yard Dog and Lex Luger, better known collectively as the "Dudes with Attitudes", has been especially gratifying. Whether in tag team or single's competition, there's never been any sign of a losing streak. Well, if you are going to go out, doing so when you're on the top is the best way to go.

Paul claims he wants to spend more time with his family in Georgia and cut down on his time on the road. He wants to accept matches on a schedule that better complies to his business ventures outside of wrestling. But rest assured, there's no slowing "Mr. Wonderful" down. He's still ready and raring to go.

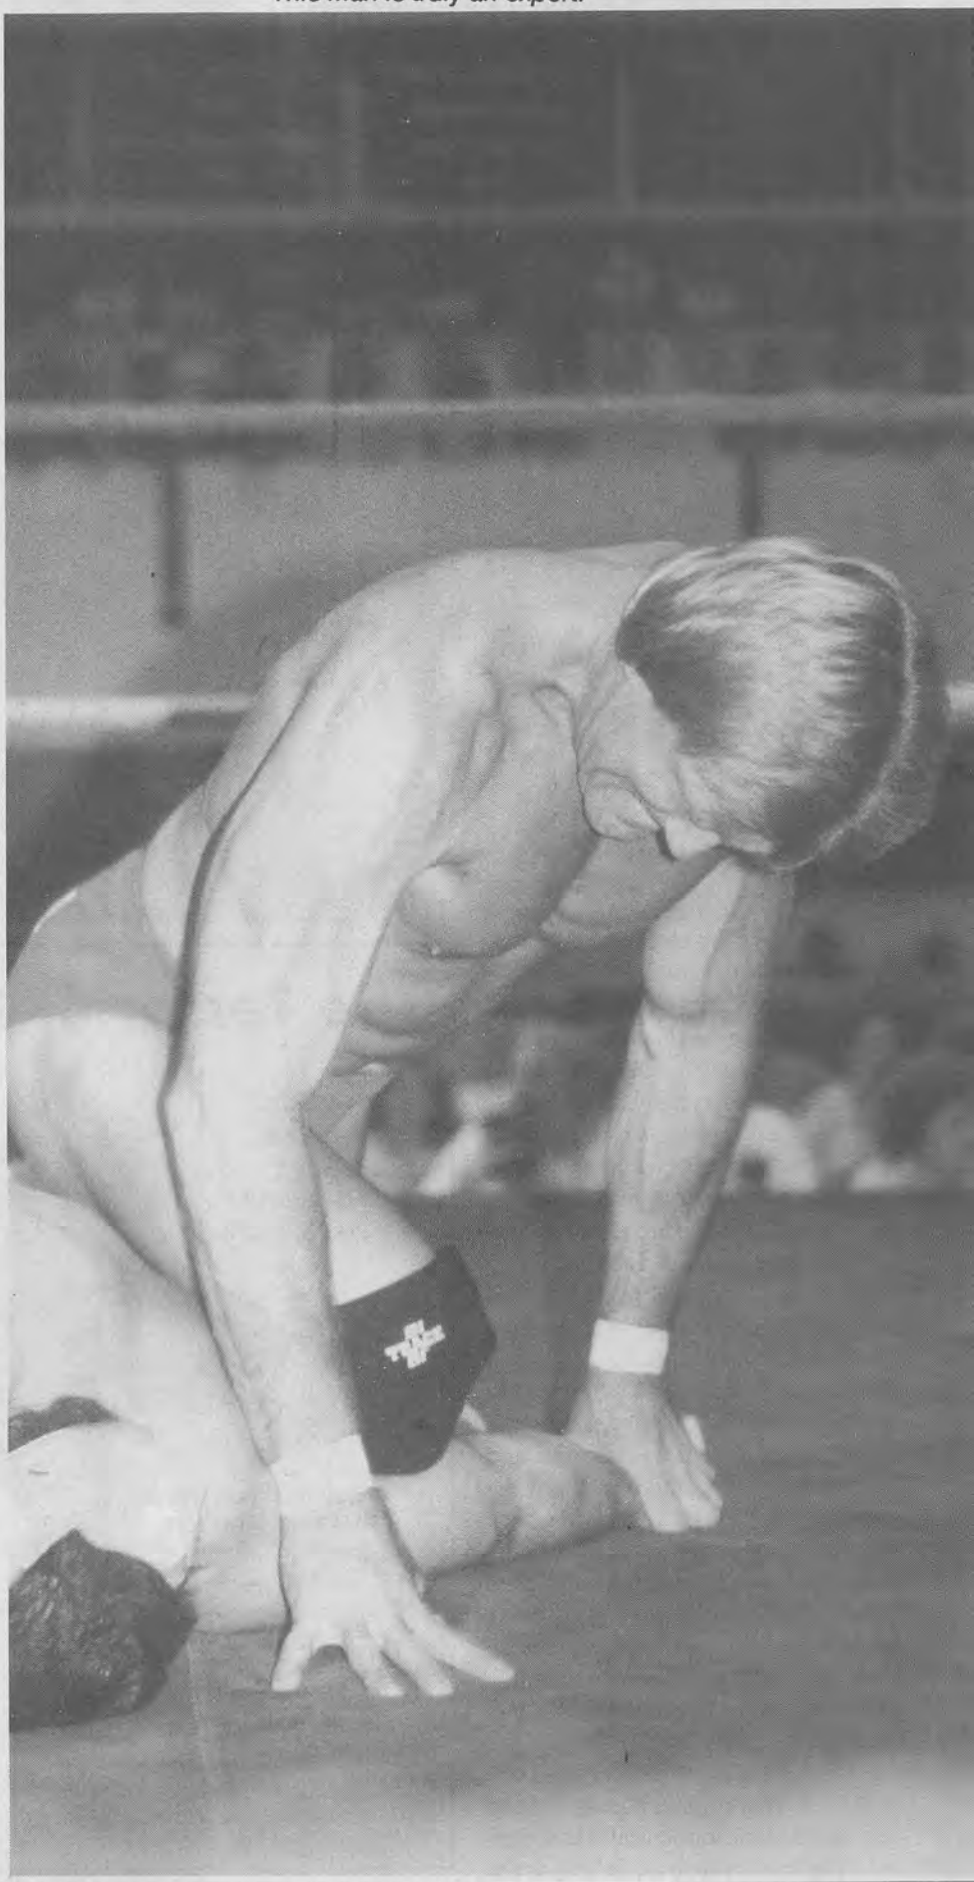
Paul's stint in the NWA was quite impressive. He only needed six minutes to pin a tough contender like "Mean" Mark Callas. At 6'7", Callas was a much larger foe than Orndorff had been used to facing. Mark's main move, the heart punch, was nullified as Orndorff proved too cagey to allow himself to get set up for the blow. When "Mean" Mark attempted to walk along the top rope as a cat, picking his landing spot in which to deliver an atomic elbow smash, his popular opponent moved out of the way precisely at the right moment. Instead of cushioning the move on Orndorff's torso, "Mean" Mark's elbow was impolitely greeted by the hard mats tucked under the canvas. Paul E. Dangerously, Mark's manager was livid during the one-sided clash in favor of "Mr. Wonderful".

Just a week earlier, Four Horseman, Barry Windham also found out painfully how tough Orndorff can be in between the ring ropes. Throughout the contest Windham was flirting with defeat. He was constantly backed up against the ropes. Three consecutive clotheslines and a suplex resulted in Windham crawling to a neutral corner of the ring and desperately singling for a time out.

He was trying to stall and hoped Orndorff's temper would simmer. Not used to that kind of embarrassing treatment during a match, Barry caused himself to be disqualified by intentionally dumping his foe up and over the top rope.

When combining ring efforts in six man tags with The Junk Yard Dog and El Gigante in opposing Arn Anderson, Sid Vicious and Barry Windham, Orndorff was nothing less than spectacular. In this and other meetings between these two teams, Anderson proved to be his main adversary. When not throwing Arn off his back, Paul made a special effort to make rookie El Gigante feel more relaxed and confident against the veterans. As muscular as he is, Orndorff displays the grace of a light-heavyweight by toppling challengers with dropkicks and flying shoulder blocks. And when fans and opponents least expect it, his favorite finisher, the piledriver, comes into play. There is no escaping the move, which in past years was banned by certain promotions due to its potentially disastrous side effects.

This man is truly an expert.



Orndorff is a master inside the squared circle.

Orndorff takes a great deal of pride in Sting's defeat of "Nature Boy" Ric Flair. He assisting others in keeping Flair's fellow Horsemen from interfering in the important matchup. Paul's 6'3", 260 pound imposing physique was enough to deter the threats facing Sting from outside the ring.

It's rather ironic how well Paul's career was revived in the NWA after departing from the WWF. For it was in the early 1980's where he made his national mark on the Superstation WTBS, as was the case this past Spring. But perhaps the biggest match to date of "Mr. Wonderful's" career, as far as public exposure goes, took place on March 31, 1985 in New York's Madison Square Garden - WrestleMania 1. With Roddy Piper as his tag partner and Cowboy Bob Orton standing in his corner as an insurance factor from potential interference from his opponent's cornerman Jimmy Snuka, Orndorff dealt with the duo of Hulk Hogan and Mr. T. It is generally accepted by the public that this was the single match that changed the sport of pro wrestling to the glamorous event it has evolved into today.

There are some definite points of interest that Paul has concerning his NWA stint in 1990. "One wrestler that I would have wanted to meet one-on-one is Cactus Jack Manson. He's the craziest man I've ever seen in a ring and remember, I wrestled George "The Animal" Steele. Brian Pillman is definitely a future champ as long as he remains as dedicated to conditioning at the level he is at currently. Everything about the NWA is first rate, believe me, none of my matches were as easy as some may have looked," Orndorff reminisced.

This is not an ending to "Mr. Wonderful's" mat days but just a new beginning as to how he will approach them. While the same wrestling road may not be traveled, the same level of pride displayed during each confrontation will still be there. Stay tuned for his usual non-stop thrills, they are sure to appear soon at a local arena near you.

SGT SLAUGHTER

TRUTH, JUSTICE AND THE AMERICAN WAY

BY STEVE MUELLER

Long time WWF fans remember Sergeant Slaughter's debut in World Wrestling Federation rings during the late seventies. Managed by the legendary Grand Wizard, he was the personification of every soldier's worst boot camp nightmare; a towering, snarling malevolent push-up orderer whose favorite word was maggot and favorite pastime was watching others suffer. Some fans claim, in those days, Slaughter used to visit hospitals not to cheer up the sick, but rather to watch their pain. Other fans remember his vicious feud with then WWF champion Bob Backlund, capsulized by the bizarre scene of Slaughter whipping Backlund with a riding crop and Backlund weeping with rage afterward.

Historians recall that Backlund never got a clean win over Slaughter during that feud. In fact, in the bout that climaxed their feud, held in Madison Square Garden, Slaughter had Backlund trapped in the cobra clutch in the center of the ring when Backlund's manager, Arnold Skaaland, saved Bob's title by whacking Slaughter over the head with a metal chair. Though he didn't win the WWF title, Slaughter did win the absolute hatred of the fans. Then something happened.

The Viet Nam Era and all its pain and turmoil was finally over. A new enemy was on the scene and this time Americans were united in their desire to batter this real life villain. The Iranian hostage crisis, in a way, brought America back together from the dissension caused by the war in Viet Nam. A new spirit of patriotism was born. Americans experienced a renewed belief in the ideals that once made America the Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave. And the soldiers were heroes again.

Something was changing in the wrestling world as well. Early in 1984,

The Sarge can really dish it out.

Hulk Hogan had rescued the WWF from the grim reality of having the savage Iranian, the Iron Sheik, as its champion. But even though he had been soundly defeated by the Hulkster, the Iron Sheik remained an ever present danger.

As it happened, one night the Iron Sheik was leaving the ring after the match. Sergeant Slaughter was walking toward it to start his. They met in the aisle and the confrontation that occurred and the subsequent Boot Camp Death Matches between the two firmly established Sergeant Slaughter as one of the most popular wrestlers ever to appear in WWF rings. Some said that at this time, his popularity was greater than even that of America's hero, the Hulkster.

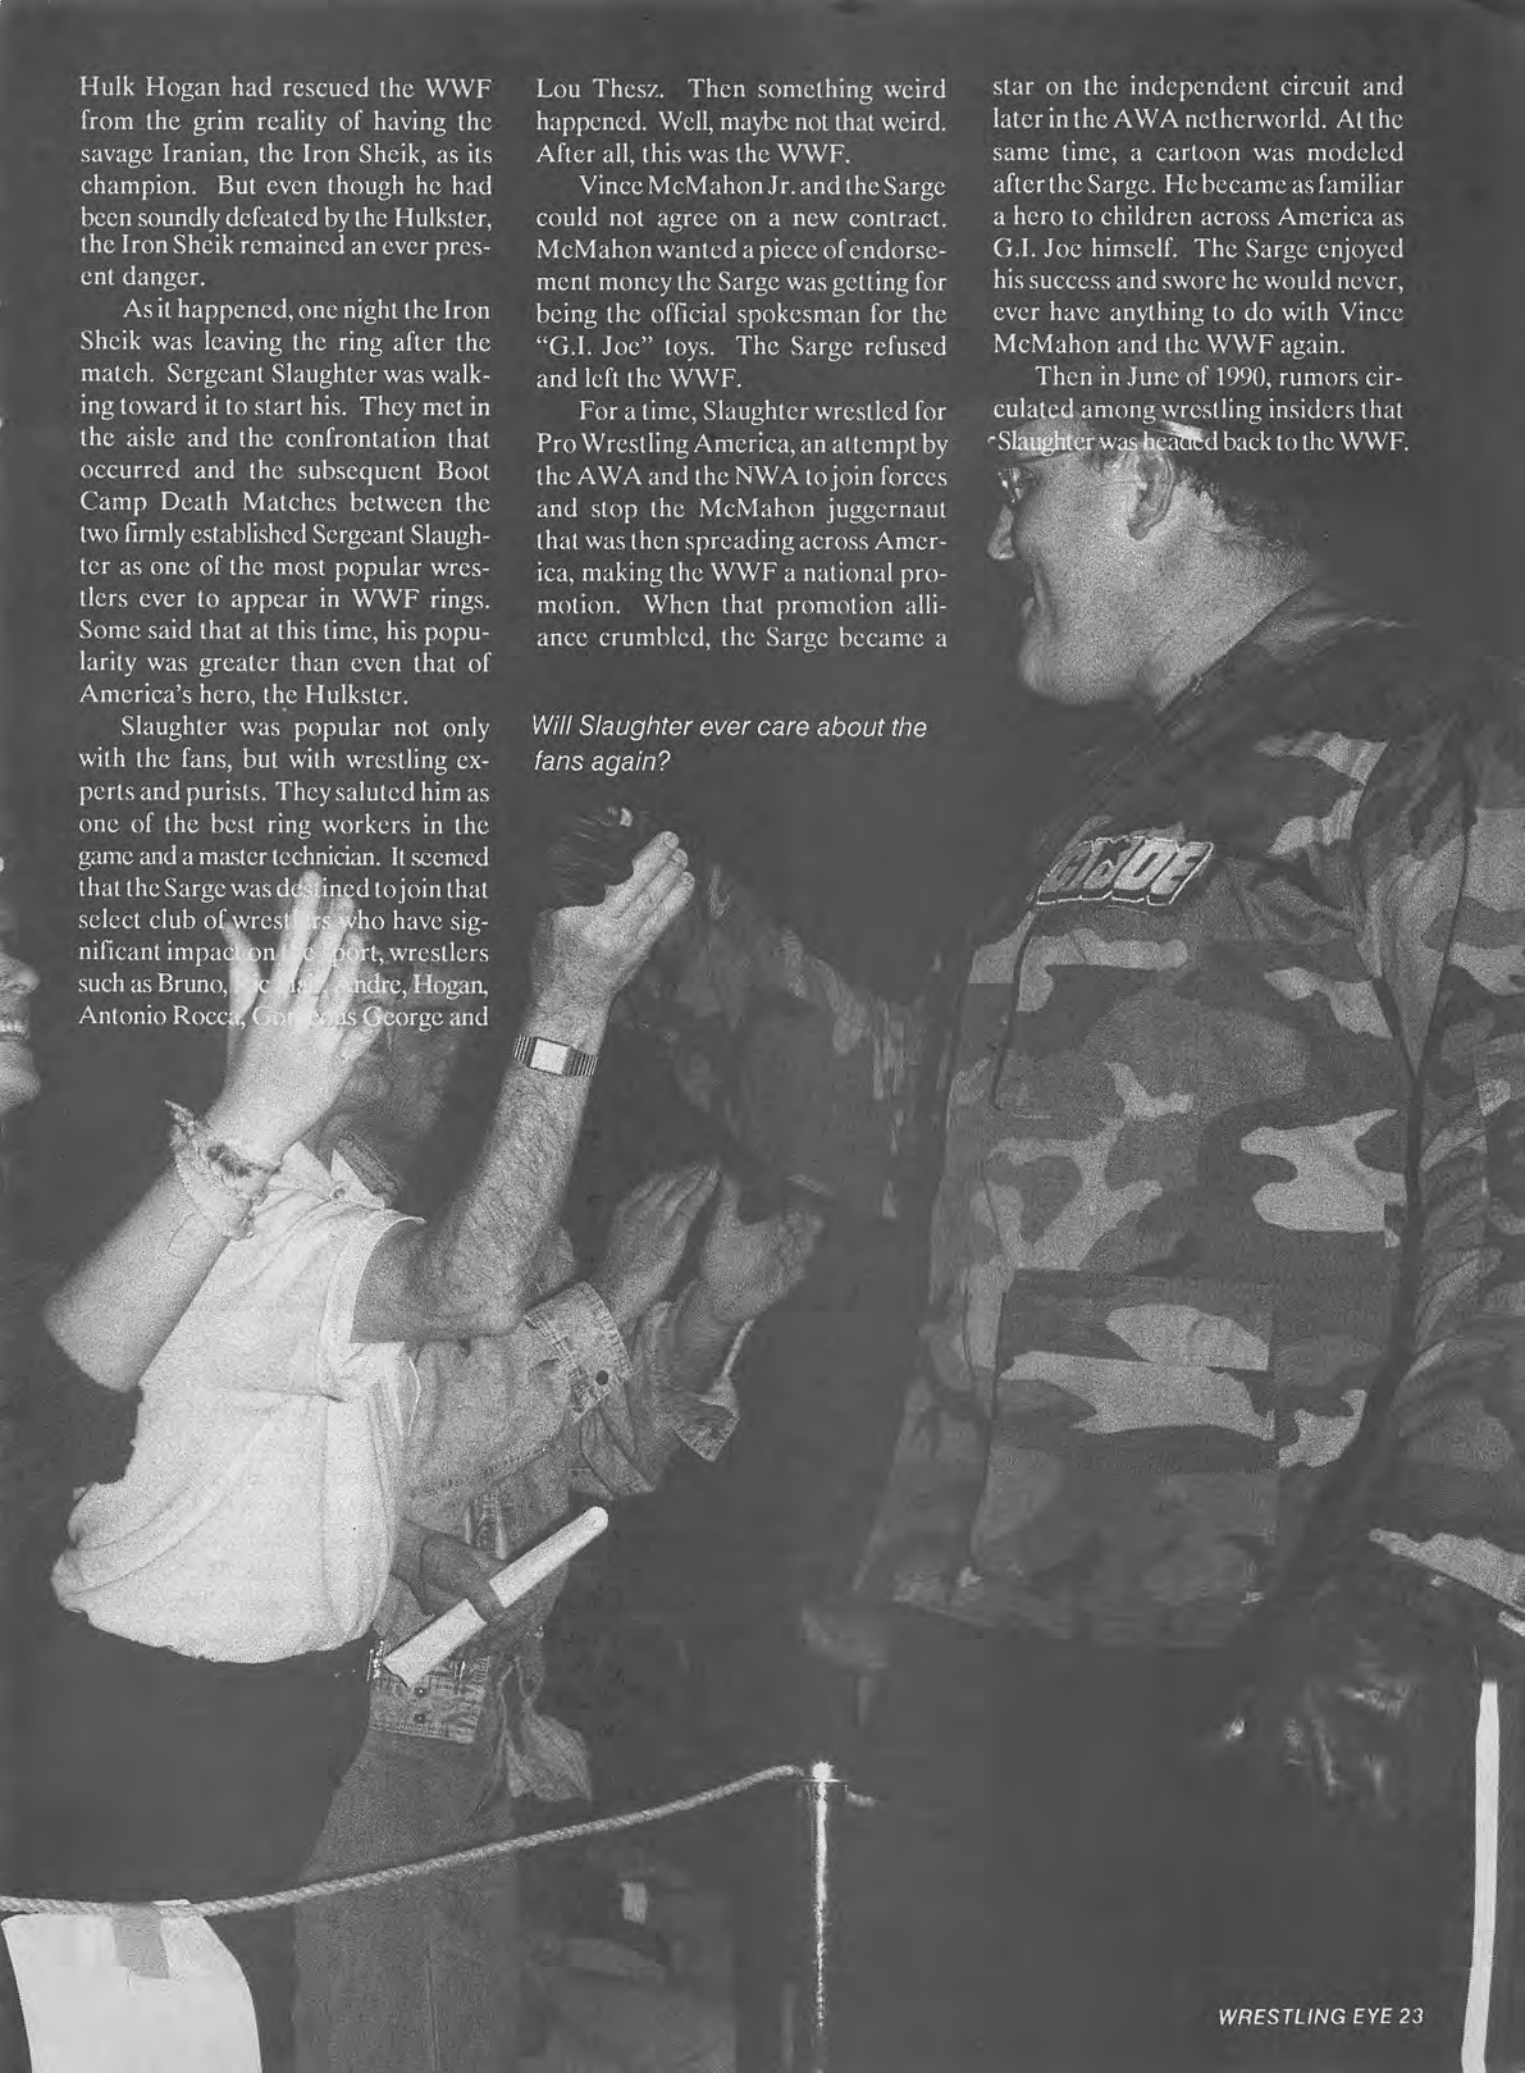
Slaughter was popular not only with the fans, but with wrestling experts and purists. They saluted him as one of the best ring workers in the game and a master technician. It seemed that the Sarge was destined to join that select club of wrestlers who have significant impact on the sport, wrestlers such as Bruno, [illegible]Andre, Hogan, Antonio Rocca, Gorgeous George and Lou Thesz. Then something weird happened. Well, maybe not that weird. After all, this was the WWF.

Vince McMahon Jr. and the Sarge could not agree on a new contract. McMahon wanted a piece of endorsement money the Sarge was getting for being the official spokesman for the "G.I. Joe" toys. The Sarge refused and left the WWF.

For a time, Slaughter wrestled for Pro Wrestling America, an attempt by the AWA and the NWA to join forces and stop the McMahon juggernaut that was then spreading across America, making the WWF a national promotion. When that promotion alliance crumbled, the Sarge became a star on the independent circuit and later in the AWA netherworld. At the same time, a cartoon was modeled after the Sarge. He became as familiar a hero to children across America as G.I. Joe himself. The Sarge enjoyed his success and swore he would never, ever have anything to do with Vince McMahon and the WWF again.

Then in June of 1990, rumors circulated among wrestling insiders that Slaughter was headed back to the WWF.

Will Slaughter ever care about the fans again?



Slaughter mans the phones.

The Sarge is hot on Nikolai Volkoff's trail

"Impossible" was the general opinion. The Sarge said he'd never return." In wrestling, never say never.

Slaughter has returned to the WWF but not in the way expected. Slaughter has reverted to his heel personal. On videos promoting his return, he is again the snarling drill sergeant with the bad attitude. Among the best WWF videos ever shot, Slaughter tells the fans how they let him down, how their new support of the suddenly Lithuanian Nikolai Volkoff is treason. Gone is the hero of G.I. Joe cartoons.

On his return, Slaughter was, of course, matched against Volkoff in mid-card bouts across America. And he was booed. But there are many who still remember the good Slaughter and and how he stood up to America. And now, with a new crisis in the Mideast threatening the security of the world, with Americans once again turning to the military to rescue them from the threats of mad oppressors, the obvious question is just how long will Slaughter stay a heel? Already, many accuse both Slaughter and the WWF of the worst kind of irresponsible behavior. They say that portraying an American soldier as a vicious heel, especially in a time of national crisis, is despicable, stupid, and in worst taste than a Big Boss Man or a Red Rooster. What will the WWF and Vince McMahon decide is more important: counting the box office receipts from Slaughter/Hogan and Slaughter/Warrior matches or demonstrating the proper respect due America's soldiers. Stay tuned.

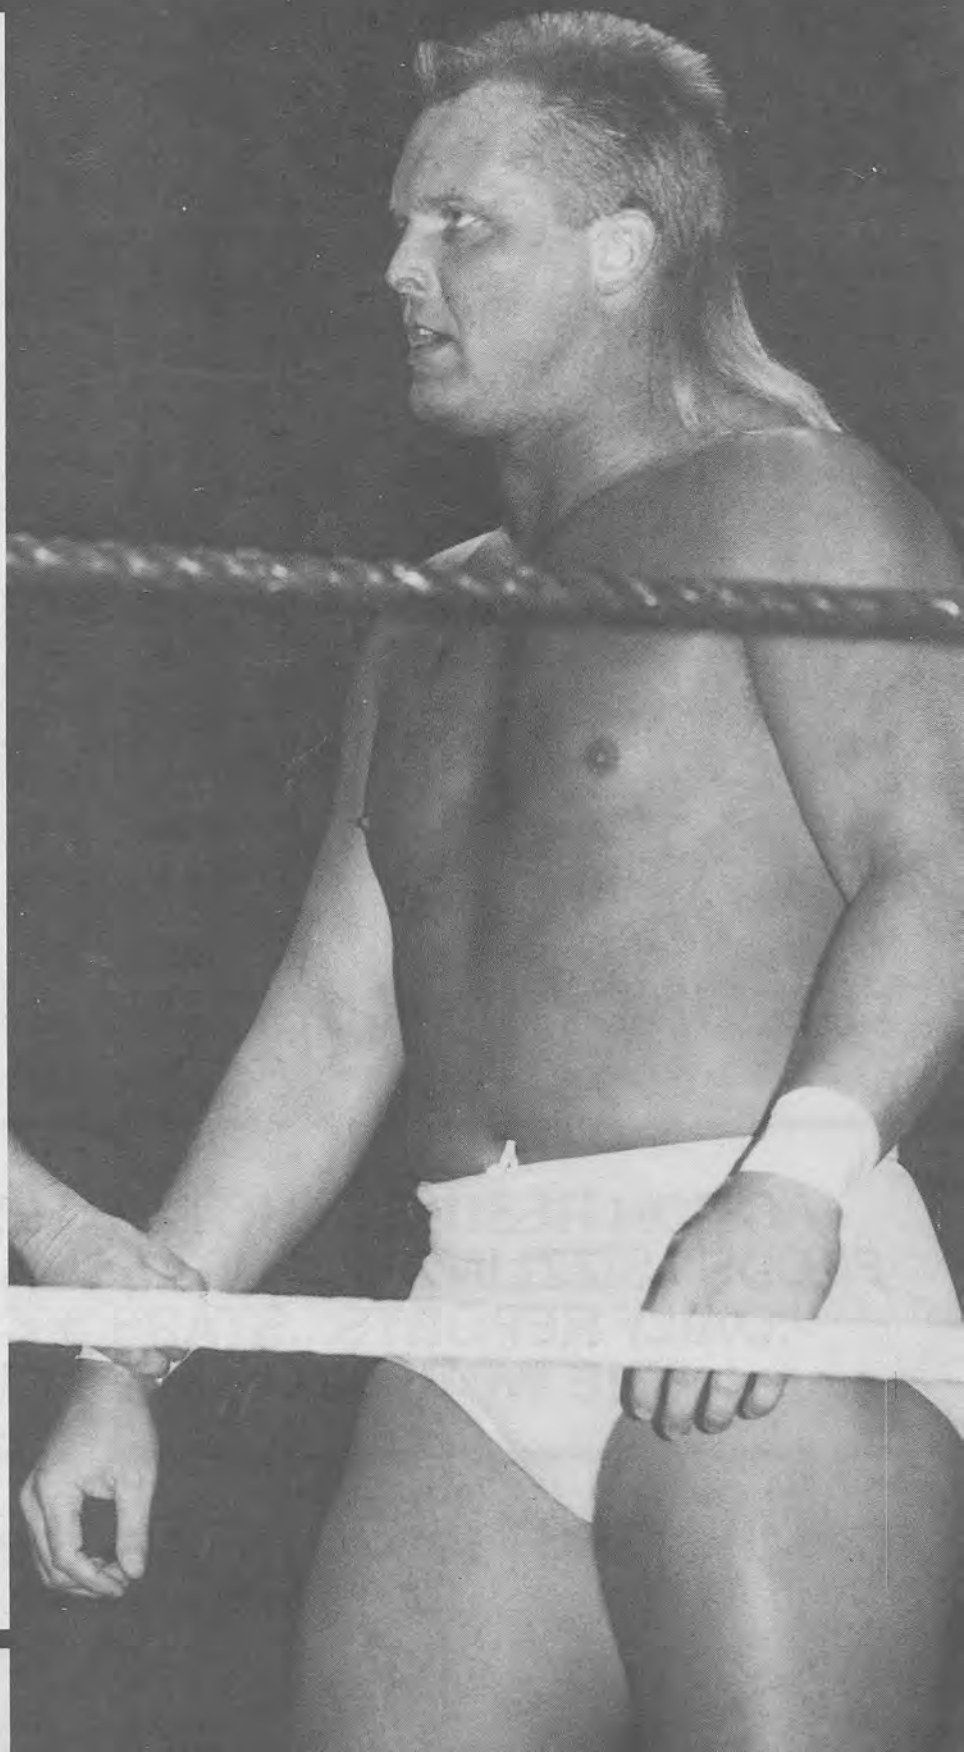
TRACKING THE VANISHING SUPERSTARS

Danny Spivey was recently spotted around independent rings.



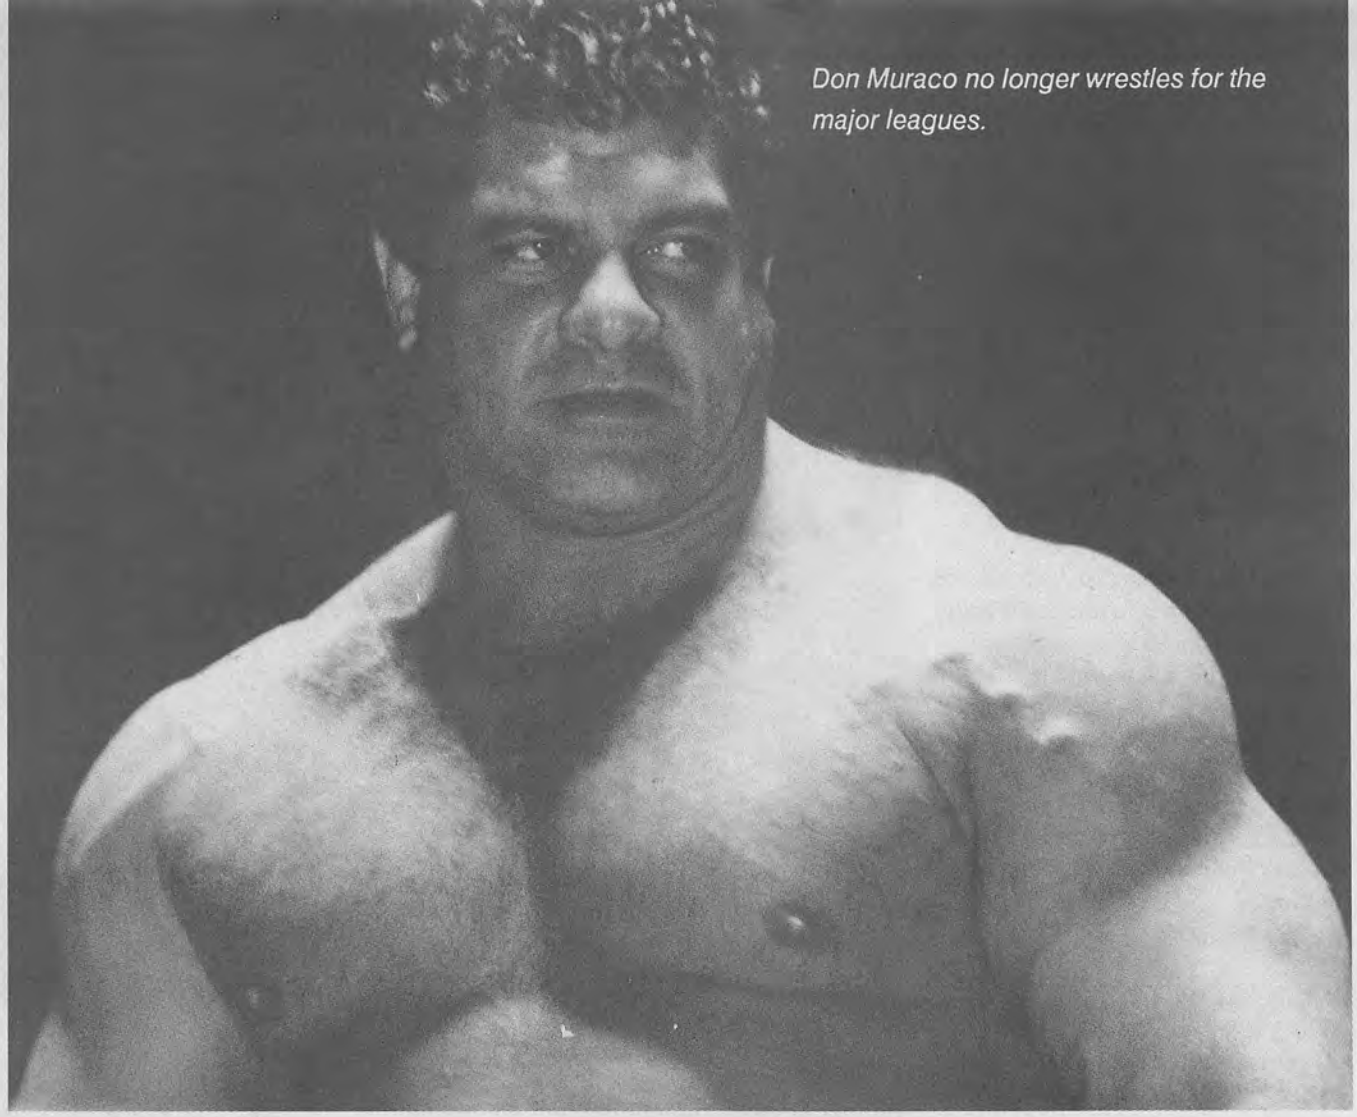
Once, long ago, the wrestling business was really a circuit of venues. Wrestlers worked for independent promotions and travelled from town to town just like vaudeville performers. Each independent promotion had its own geographical boundaries. Most wrestlers worked for a promotion for a limited time, usually six months to a year. When fans lost interest in a wrestler's gimmick or ring persona, he travelled to a new promotional area. This touring circuit kept professional wrestling vibrant and fresh.

It all changed in 1984 when the WWF became a national promotion. Since then, many regional promotions have folded and the wrestling business has become mostly a battlefield for the war between the WWF and the NWA for national supremacy. Because there are so few regional promotions now, when a wrestler's run is finished in the NWA or the WWF, he can vanish into obscurity.

Stardom in the two national promotions can be as fleeting as a first kiss. January's star becomes December's hazy memory. Fans might remember a wrestler only as "that guy who used to wrestle with orange face paint and teased dyed blond hair". In recent years, the ranks of shooting stars, flashing and vanishing, have become legion. WRESTLING EYE has done extensive research to bring you this report on the current status of these former major league stars.

TULLY BLANCHARD

For the moment at least, Tully has retired from the wrestling business. He claims to have had a profound religious experience and is currently lecturing in churches and universities about the evils of drug abuse.



Don Muraco no longer wrestles for the major leagues.

RICK STEAMBOAT

The former NWA World Champion is spending most of his time running his gym in Charlotte, North Carolina. Occasionally, he works for some independent promotions and has done some shots with the AWA. There is talk in the NWA offices that some attempt may be made to bring Steamboat back. However, this is a long shot. Steamboat left the promotion on very bad terms when a new contract could not be reached in July, 1989. Subsequently, the Steamer sued the NWA for using his name in promotional material when he was no longer under contract. The case is still in the courts.

DON MURACO

Muraco was a regular WWF headliner for many years until a dispute with Vince McMahon ended his career in Vinceland. Recently, the Magnificent one has become a promoter and is booking shows in New Zealand. Since leaving the WWF, he has wrestled in Hawaii, in Canada for Stampede Wrestling, for the AWA, and for various independent American promotions. He is not planning to return to the WWF, although, according to WWF insiders, such a move remains a possibility.

BOB ORTON

After a dispute with the NWA matchmakers over booking policies, Cowboy Bob left the promotion in early 1989. Orton travelled to Japan and wrestled there for most of the year. Since his return to the United States, he has been competing for various independent promotions such as the IWA and ICW. Periodically, rumors surface that he is returning to either the WWF or the NWA. They appear to be only rumors.

NIKITA KOLOFF

It seems that with every month that passes another insider claims that he is certain that Nikita will soon be returning to the NWA. And while that remains a real possibility, Nikita has been wrestling primarily for the AWA and for independent promotions near his home in the Carolina region.

ABDULLAH THE BUTCHER

The rumors that Abdullah was recently serving as America's goodwill ambassador to Iraq are completely false. After his brief return earlier this year to the NWA as a hero, Abdullah returned to working for independent promotions particularly Carlos Colon's World Wrestling Council, based in San Juan, Puerto Rico. He is also working for Joe Pedicino's new Georgia promotion.

DANNY SPIVEY

For a while, it seemed that Spivey, as one half of the Skyscrapers tag team, was certain to become a major star in the NWA. Unfortunately, early in 1990, Spivey missed some house show dates, became involved in a dispute over scheduling with the NWA booking team of the moment, and was dismissed. Since then, Spivey has been wrestling in Japan.

In the coming months, he plans to work for independent American promotions such as the new Universal Wrestling Federation, based in California.

THE PUNISHER AND THE MASTER OF PAIN

No, this was not a tag team. These were both ring identities of Mark Callaway. Callaway now wrestles for the NWA as Mean Mark Callas.

THE GREAT MUTA

The wrestler who many experts called the second coming of Jimmy Snuka is back in Japan after a dispute over bookings-yes, another one - with the NWA matchmakers. It seems the NWA wanted Muta to turn hero, and he wanted to remain a heel. Muta's dissatisfaction with the workings and opinions of the NWA booking team forced him to leave the promotion. At this time, Muta is not planning a return to American rings.

HUBIE MARX

Currently Hubie is deeply depressed and has abandoned most of his managerial duties. The sudden and unexpected reappearance of his twin brother, the Creator, is responsible for Hubie's psychic torment. Insiders claim the Creator holds some dark and sinister power over Hubie.

EDDIE GILBERT

After leaving the NWA in July, Gilbert returned to the scene of his greatest accomplishments, Jarret Promotions in Memphis. Gilbert, besides becoming one of that promotion's leading wrestlers, is also functioning as its chief booker. He will also wrestle for the company's Texas division.

WOMAN

After a turbulent year of advising Doom and the Four Horsemen, Woman has faded from the NWA scene. Formerly known in wrestling circles as the Fallen Angel, it is rumored among NWA insiders that Woman is currently organizing a coven of witches and warlocks. They predict she will soon reappear on the wrestling scene as kind of a more diabolical version of Sensational/Scary Sherri Martel. These reports have not been confirmed. Woman has recently appeared for some independent Southern promotions such as Peach State Wrestling, based in Cordeo, Georgia.

It sure would be nice to see Steamboat back in the ring.

KEVIN SULLIVAN

Soon after Ole Anderson became the NWA's chief booker, Sullivan, a former important member of the NWA Booking Team, broke some fingers in a match and could not wrestle. Since then, he has also vanished from his role as a ringside commentator.

Sullivan's future is uncertain even though he continues to work for the NWA as a road manager. His plans for returning to ring action are not known. There are reports that he is secretly a member of Woman's coven.

TERRY "BAM-BAM" GORDY

Terry is a major star in Japan and holds a variety of tag team and individual championships. Gordy's future plans include only sporadic appearances in American rings for independent promotions in the South. Some insiders believe he will eventually return to the NWA and his former partners, the Fabulous Freebirds. However, there are other reports that claim that Gordy is very upset with Michael Hayes for wearing eye make-up.

MAGNUM TA

Since leaving his broadcast duties with the NWA, Terry Allen has been running his own business in the Carolinas. At present, he has no plans to return to the grappling game.

IVAN PUTSKI

Since leaving the WWF in the mid-eighties, Polish Power has appeared for various independent promotions, primarily in the Southwest. He was a prime mover behind the Houston based World Wrestling Alliance promotion that debuted and folded over the past summer.

BOB BACKLUND

Despite his brief return to the ring in Japan for that nation's Universal Wrestling Federation in 1989, Backlund remains retired from the sport. Some WWF insiders claim that the former WWF World Champ will finally give in to Vince McMahon's demand that he dye his hair black and become a villain. Unfortunately, this rumor has not been confirmed.

THE ROAD WARRIORS

Currently they are wrestling in the WWF as the Legion of Doom. Why they are no longer called the Road Warriors is not clear.

ZEUS

The star of stage and screen, if not wrestling rings, returned to action against an opponent other than Hulk Hogan in July in Puerto Rico. Zeus, also known as Tom "Tiny" Lister, worked for the World Wrestling Council. Reports from ringside stated that many Puerto Rican fans went to the concession stands when Zeus entered the ring. Other reports state that upon hearing this, Vince McMahon is considering rehiring Zeus in an obvious move to increase concession sales.

JAMMING IN JAPAN!

AMERICAN TAG TEAMS HEAT UP THE EAST

BY DON LAIBLE PHOTOS BY KOICHI YOSHIZAWA

Take a look at a test of strength between Steve Williams and Owen Hart.

Bring them back. Four of professional wrestling's most exciting competitors throughout the world, all hailing from North America, are currently displaying their talents in the Orient. Read the wrestling magazines, watch video tapes of their matches, spend a few dollars on airline tickets; do whatever you have to, but stop ignoring them. The much talked about tag teams of "Dr. Death" Steve Williams and The Pegasus Kid, and Bam-Bam Bigelow with Owen Hart have been packing in arenas all over Japan. Championship belts have been captured and victories over a number of Japanese mat greats have been scored by members of both teams. All four wrestlers possess far too much talent to not be offered roster positions with the National Wrestling Alliance or World Wrestling Federation. Wake up, guys and give the fans who support you some great athletes to get excited about.

There was no time for Owen Hart to prepare for this important tag battle. After arriving in Tokyo's International Airport after participating in a multiweek wrestling tournament in Germany, he hopped into a taxi heading straight for the arena where his tag partner,

Bam-Bam Bigelow was waiting. "Dr. Death and The Pegasus

Kid were also anxious for his arrival for they were going to be in the opposite corner. Once each team worked out their game plans, both duos were quite confident of a victory. Williams and Bigelow would handle the power moves while Hart and the Kid would do what they do best, baffle each other as best they could with high flying aerial maneuvers. From start to finish there were no disappointments as the audience appeared to cheer continuously in appreciation for the fine display of athletics.

The first ten minutes of competition saw both teams at pretty much of a standstill, with each wrestler countering holds applied to them. The match began to swing in Williams' and The Kid's favor when Owen apparently injured his left foot. While Hart was limping and attempting to desperately shield his tender toes, The Kid prematurely went for the pin. However, Hart, 6'1" and 225 pounds wasn't quite ready to give in to defeat.

The Pegasus Kid received quite a surprise when he lifted Hart off the top turnbuckle and followed through with a backward suplex. Hart, always a step ahead of the competition, reversed his positioning and landed on top of the Kid when they crashed down to the mat for the pin. Bigelow, an imposing 6'3", 370 pound Asbury Park, New Jersey resident, and Hart were ecstatic with their victory.

Dick "the Destroyer" Beyer was on hand to witness the intense action. "What an uplifting way to begin a tour. To be honest, I didn't expect a pinfall. A time limit draw is how I figured the match to end. How can you not be impressed with those two teams? They have it all, speed, power and equally important, they get along well with their partners. When each of the four have been involved in singles competition, their partner has been close at ringside keeping an eye out so no funny business goes on. Giant Baba, Antonio Inoki and all the greats from our sport in Japan are impressed with both teams," he said.

Don't think there isn't a competitive race going on among Williams, the Kid, Hart and Bigelow. There certainly is and it's intensifying with each match. In Miyako, Japan, "Dr. Death" enjoyed a rare day off from his grueling ring schedule. That day, The Pegasus Kid (who is believed to be Chris Benoit of Edmonton, Alberta, Canada under the mask) formed a partnership with The Soultaker, a 6'8" monster. These two made quite a contrast. The Kid, who is 5'10" and 215 pounds looked miniscule next to his partner but looks can be deceiving. It only took five minutes for the duo to score a decisive victory over their opponents.

Still recovering from that hard fought battle, The Pegasus Kid skipped showering and the customary press conference. His main concern was getting back out to ringside to view up close the challenge Owen Hart had awaiting him from Tatayuki Izuka. The Kid wanted to be prepared for his next encounter against Hart.

Biff Wellington, a wrestler who hails from Calgary, Alberta, Canada, like Owen Hart, has become friendly with both Hart and the Kid and tries to stay neutral concerning their ring battles. However, at this stage of the game, Wellington gives the slight edge to the Kid. Recently, in a singles match against Keiji Muto, better known as The Great Muta, The Pegasus Kid baffled him with an array of moves that caused the Japanese sensation to grasp the air, ring ropes and referee instead of his challenger.

Most experts who have seen the both teams square off agree that two more evenly matched sides don't exist in the sport. Williams, at 6'2" and 270 pounds like Bigelow, is as quick as a cat when inside the ring ropes. If you find that difficult to believe, seeing is believing. There is no energy shortage when all four men meet. They put so much into each confrontation, promoters are afraid of serious injuries to any one of the competitors. Hart and the Kid don't back down when they don't face each other. The bigger opponent doesn't scare either of them. Hart has taken the thundering powerslams and flying body presses from the larger "Dr. Death" and survived.

The athletic talents of both tag teams seem to be far more appreciated in Japan than in North America. Although they have all competed for the NWA or the WWF (with the exception of the Pegasus Kid) in the past, only the Japanese promoters and fans have appreciated the ring abilities of these athletes. One Japanese fan said, "Why should they waste their time in the U.S.? We love these guys here!" Maybe the major organizations should listen to the Japanese fans. Williams, Bigelow, Hart and The Pegasus Kid are all superstars in their own right. Let the American fans see what real quality wrestling is all about.

JULES STRONGBOW
THE RENEGADE CHIEF

BY STEVE MUELLER

Jules Strongbow was a beloved hero for many promotions.

The IWA television taping was well into its third hour when Afa the Samoan came to the ring. He was scheduled to team with his brother Sika against the villainous duo of Ray Apollo and Larry Cameron, but Sika hadn't arrived at the arena. Afa decided to begin the match alone, thinking that his brother would soon arrive. That didn't happen.

After holding his own for a time against two opponents, Afa weakened and was being savagely tortured by Cameron and Apollo. In the shadows outside the dressing room entrance, Chief Jules Strongbow grimaced as Cameron and Apollo double slammed Afa. When the mighty Samoan collapsed onto the mat with a sickening thud, Jules ran to the ring and offered to be Afa's tag partner. Despite the protesters of Cameron and Apollo, the ref allowed Strongbow to enter the match. Thus far, what happened that night is not that unusual for wrestling. What happened next, however, is weird.

During the heat of the battle, Afa accidentally slugged Jules. The blow must have been hard enough to snap something deep within Jules's psyche. He became a wildman, as maniacal as any wild savage circling wagons in the Old West. His rage continued long after the match was over. And as a result, Jules Strongbow has become a dastardly villain. It is a difficult concept to accept, like hearing that Rambo has backed down from a fight or that a pro baseball player has asked for a pay cut because of a bad season.

Could that savage beserker be the same man who once, after winning the WWF Tag Team Championship with his brother Jay, kneeled and screamed that he finally could go home again, that the disgrace was over? Earlier that year, Jules and Jay had lost the tag straps to the villainous Japanese of Fuji and Saito. Jules was pinned in that match, and despite the questionable nature of the pin, Jules felt disgraced and believed that the loss so dishonored him and his tribe, he couldn't face them until he avenged the loss.

Strongbow has undergone a complete attitude change.

Many fans want to knock Jules out.

The obvious question that arises is whether Jules can return to his tribal homeland now after his despicable turn to villainy. To find the answer, WRESTLING EYE dispatched a team of reporters to the Indian reservation in Oklahoma that Strongbow calls home and he is the tribe's chief. That investigative team uncovered some startling facts.

When word of Strongbow's villainy spread among the tribe members, most refused to believe it. However, soon the dastardly doings of the Chief were shown on television. Strongbow's tribe gathered to watch Sportschannel America's cablecast of Strongbow's unbelievable turn. When it was over, children cried uncontrollably. Women wailed that the end of the world was certainly at hand. The Elders of the tribe looked for a sign from the gods. As if on cue, a black cloud passed in front of the moon. The Elders knew what they had to do.

A special tribal meeting was called. Such a meeting hadn't been held in over 100 years. It had been that long since the tribe had thought it necessary to get rid of its chief. The meeting was held at midnight during the first phase of the Hunter's Moon. THe tribe's medicine man presided over the gathering. He placed a feather, taken from the ceremonial headdress worn by Strongbow at solemn tribal occasions, on the ground in the center of flaming torches. his voice echoed across the reservation. "Let the gods decide the fate of Jules Strongbow." The medicine man raised his arms to heavens and tossed something that looked like flaky white dust onto the feather. The gathered tribe chanted sacred words of Indian lore. Suddenly, the feather burst into flames and was gone.

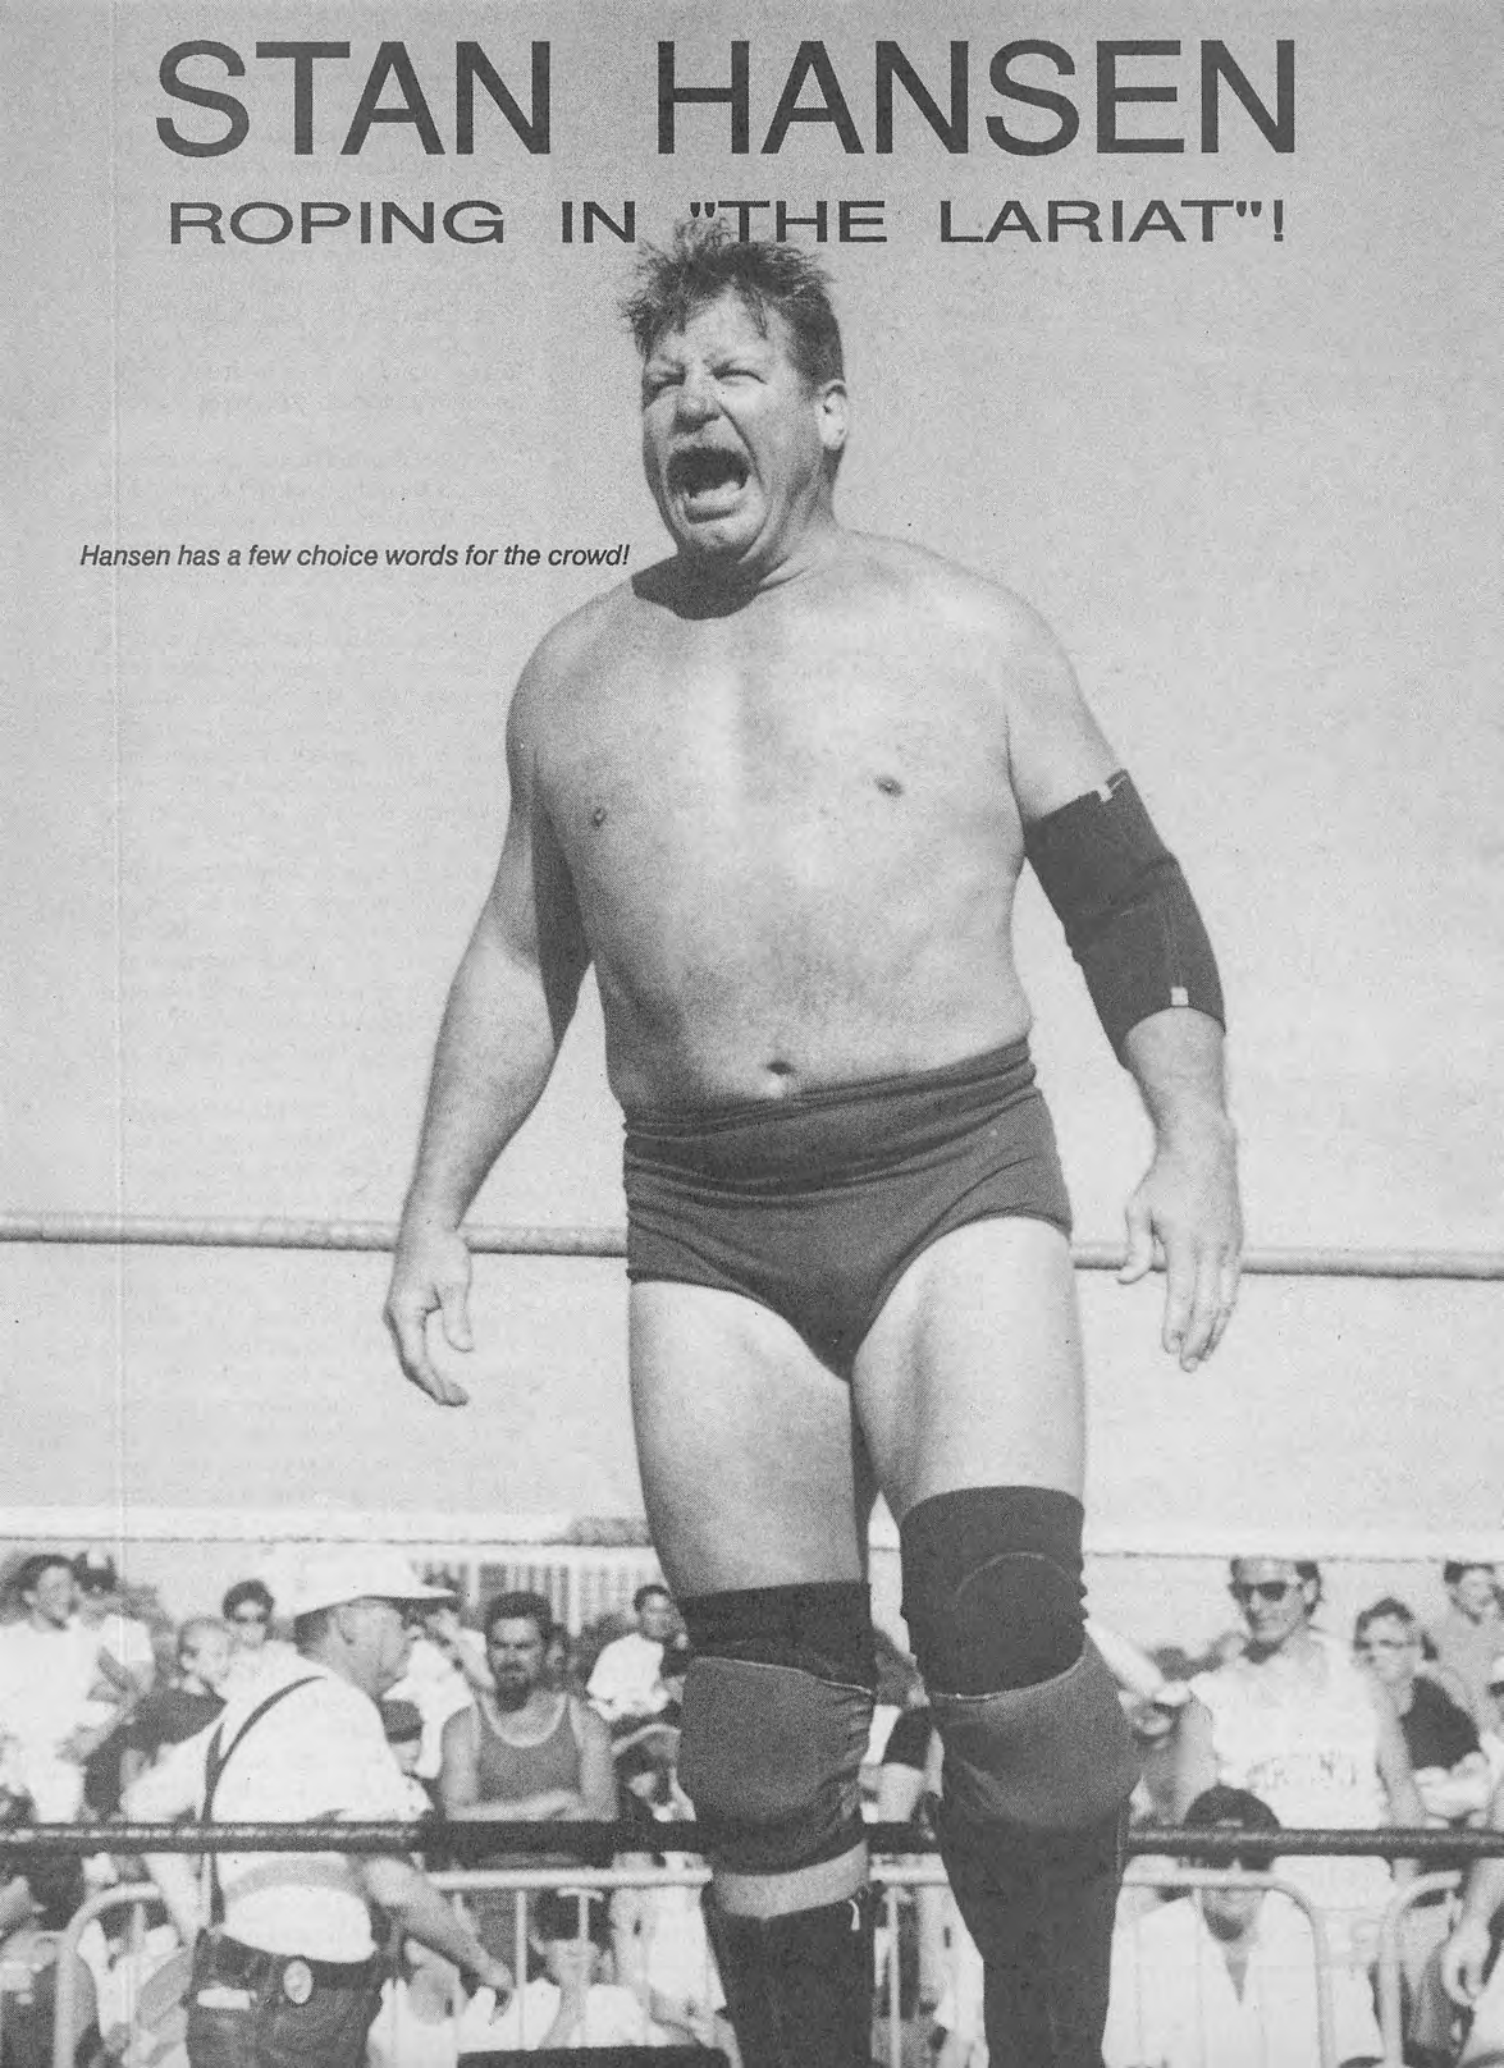
"The gods have decided," wailed the medicine man. "Jules Strongbow is no longer our chief. He is a renegade. I cast him out. For us, Jules Strongbow is dead."

And so, once again, Jules Strongbow cannot return to his home. This time, however, Jules may never be able to return. Now he doesn't merely have to avenge a loss, he has to re-earn the respect and admiration of the men who once called him Chief. He showed no sign that he will ever try to do that. He has become a far different man from the one who kneeled with his brother Jay, rejoicing that he could at last go home again. His sense of honor, his loyalty to the code of the warrior has been replaced by evil and dark intentions. In fact, he now acts as though he doesn't care if he ever returns to his tribe.

Wrestling fans feel much the same way the tribe does. They feel betrayed. One fan summed it all up, "When I saw Jules Strongbow turn bad, I was crushed and shocked. I guess there really are no real heroes anymore, just bad guys who haven't turned yet."

STAN HANSEN

ROPING IN "THE LARIAT"!



Hansen has a few choice words for the crowd!

Is this guy a dirty fighter or what?!

Stan Hansen. Simply put, this is a wild man. However, don't be surprised if this native of Borger, Texas smiles when he hears that name. Hansen's ferociousness and prowess as a rugged athlete continues to grow. He is not scared of any man and always does an admirable job in the ring. In fact, he makes a point of beating every opponent to a brutal pulp, so most do not find him endearing. Hansen is not content to bash opponents only in the United States. He has also ventured to Japan on many occasions. In fact, Hansen has become the most traveled American wrestler to the land of the rising sun. Because of his rigorous travel schedule, many U.S. who wrestlers want a piece of Hansen's hide have been frustrated in their attempts to even the score with "The Lariat."

Stan Hansen is currently seeing mat action in the NWA. Now the big question is just who will rid the promotion of this lunatic. Newly crowned N.W.A. champ, Sting is too busy with the challenges of Sid Vicious and former champ, Ric Flair. He has no time for Hansen. U.S. champ Lex Luger is also busy feuding with the Four Horsemen, and has no time to devote in ridding Hansen from the NWA. Who will get the job done? Is there anyone that can even come close in taming the 6'4", 322 pound Texan? Many men have tried. Terry Taylor, who has gained much success in the past with the WWF fell in a horrible defeat to Hansen. Chops, slams, and kicks bruised the young competitor severely. When we asked Taylor about a recent defeat to Hansen in Allentown, Pa., Taylor moaned disgustedly, "no comment".

Tommy "Wildfire" Rich has also come up short when he battled Hansen. In every match Rich looked strong from the onset but his flame of enthusiasm quickly dwindled to that of a mere flicker. Ten minutes into the match, Stan remained on the offensive until Rich just couldn't go anymore. Hansen showed no mercy for his former tag team partner. Tommy Rich was beaten and he was beaten badly.

Hansen has no allegiance, no sense of dignity, and is certainly unpredictable, so it is difficult at best to plan match strategies. And he is doubly dangerous because his challengers always have to be on the lookout for his ever present and ominous bullrope and cow bell. Hansen wouldn't hesitate to use this equipment and has even been known to tie his bullrope around his opponent's neck and hang him from the middle rope! The bottom line remains, he gets the results that others in the sport envy.

Currently in Japan, Hansen has it all as he is officially recognized by All-Japan Promotions as the Triple Crown champion. This honor is not new to Stan but this time around, the circumstances are out of the ordinary in his claiming the Pacific Wrestling Federation, United National and International titles. On July 27, 1990 in Matsudo, Japan, Terry Gordy, the holder of the Triple Crown was scheduled to defend his three belts against number one contender Mitsuharu Misawa. Unfortunately for Gordy, earlier that morning he was hospitalized in critical condition. This left the All-Japan officials scrambling for a decent and reasonable solution. It was agreed that Hansen would meet Misawa for the now vacant championships. The Texan needed only sixteen minutes to score the pinfall by using his patented move, the lariat.

However, what goes around comes around. On July 17, 1990 in Ishikawa City, Japan, it was Hansen who agreed to put his laurels on the line against fellow American, Terry Gordy. Stan whipped Terry across the ring into the ropes and was prepared to deliver his highly successful lariat for the win. But much to his surprise, Steve Williams, Gordy's tag team partner on this tour, was at ringside. Williams was aware of Hansen's strategy and purposely tripped his friend. This made Hansen's infamous move miss its mark miserably. As the man from Borger rebounded off the ring ropes, it was pay back time for Terry Gordy. He administered his own version of the lariat and pinned Hansen in twenty one minutes.

Back in the States, Stan doesn't let up for one minute on fellow N.W.A. wrestlers. He is not a well liked man and booker Ole Anderson is the first to agree. "Many people don't like him here, but that doesn't bother Stan. All those wrestlers doing the belly-aching won't come out and say what they feel in public because they know what the lariat will do to them," he said. "Doug Furnas, Trucker Norman, Tom Zenk and all the other cry-babies better get used to seeing Hansen around or run away now because he's my kind of athlete and I'll do whatever it takes to keep him in the NWA," Ole promised.

Stan Hansen is now looking forward to locking horns with NWA champ, Sting. That will be a match all eyes of the mat fans worldwide will be glued to. Until then, Hansen continues to wreak havoc on his unfortunate opponents. Perhaps the only way he'll leave the NWA will be due to burnout. But don't hold your breath. Sting, watch your step, there's a man with a mean lariat looking for you!

MEDIA REPORT

Terry Funk has some great merchandise for sale.

MEDIA REPORT

Here's a look at the latest videos, merchandise and miscellaneous paraphernalia that's available to all you wrestling enthusiasts. Without further ado, WRESTLING EYE brings you a look at the hottest finds of 1990 so far:

BLOOD THIRSTY PRODUTIONS - proudly presents Terry Funk merchandise. Included are "I'm A Funker" T-shirts and brightly emblazoned baseball caps with a terrific logo of the Double Cross Ranch. Both items are available in either hot pink or bright orange. The shirts range in size from Small to XXL and are Priced at $12.50 each. The caps are priced at $10.50 each. Postage and Handling fees are $2.75 up to $24 and $3.75 from $24 to $40. All orders can be sent to - Blood Thirsty Productions, P.O. BOX 659, Canyon, Texas 79015. Don't be an "egg suckin' dog", support the Funkster, the last of a dying breed.

MONDO PRODUCTIONS - proudly presents "The Wrestling Geek"" fanzine. No publication exploits the sport in such a way as the "Geek". It talks of subjects that even we wouldn't write of. Definitely a laugh for hardcore fans and wrestlers alike. In fact we expect "The Wrestling Geek" to be one of the hottest fan publications in the very near future. This is definitely an underground publication and someone may even bury the publisher! You can get you hands on the Geek for $2 for one trial issue and then decide if you're deranged enough for a subscription. All orders can be sent to Mondo Merchandise, P.0. B0X 15243, Philadelphia, Pa 19125.

JONATHAN PETER GOLD ENT. - proudly presents "personal appearances," of your favorite wrestling stars. This agency offers pro wrestlers for appearances at every type of function - parties, lectures, autograph sessions, grand openings, etc. Many grapplers are available so contact the office for further details.

Now you can read all about Pat Barrett's life.

This service is a great deal less expensive than you would expect. Let a "pro wrestler be the MAIN EVENT at your next function". Call J.P.G.E. at: (201) 354-4005 for further details.

FLEUR PRESS - presents the autobiography and tales of ring veteran, Irish Pat Barrett. As many will recall, Barrett held the W.W.F. tag team title back in the 70's and is regarded as one of wrestling's classic competitors. Pro wrestlers are known as being some of best "story tellers" in the world, and Mr. Barrett is no exception. In his book entitled, "Everyone Down Here Hates Me", Pat has condensed all his wild tales of the ring into a provocative two hundred sixty five Pages. He also talks in depth about the business, the promoters and the characters that one meets in the sport. Aside from entertaining and revealing stories, Pat also outlines his rise from a poor Irish immigrant to living the successful life of a pro wrestler. The trials and the tribulations of Pat Barrett are available through Fleur Press, P.O. BOX 6073, Gulf Breeze, Fl. 32561.

This book comes with our highest recommendation, and just like WRESTLING EYE magazine, it really tells it like it is!

PHANTOM of the ring

The world mourns the loss of midget wrestler, Little Beaver.

Whether it's newsworthy or not, here's what's going down...It appears that the NWA will be using lady wrestlers on their upcoming shows. SUSAN SEXTON has been wrestling BAMBI on all of the shows thus far...The AWA recently held a match where their champion, LARRY ZBYSZKO went up against former king pin HARLEY RACE in Rochester, Mn. In case you're wondering who won, nobody did. The match went to a double count out. ROCK 'N ROLL BUCK ZUMHOFE is the new light heavyweight champion of the AWA. He defeated JOHNNIE STEWART for the title. STEWART had to take a break from wrestling because he is now a full time college student. Look for him to be back next summer...The HULKSTER'S father, PETER BOL-

Pat O'Connor - a true wrestling legend.

LEA recently underwent triple bypass surgery. We wish him a speedy recovery. HULK missed a few shows because of his dad's illness...ZAN PANZER, a prelim wrestler for the NWA is really impressive. His matches against THE MIDNIGHT EXPRESS have been outrageous. ZAN doesn't let anyone push him around, even though he always loses!...The two new tag teams in the NWA, MAXIMUM OVERDRIVE And THE MASTER BLASTERS have to be the worst wrestlers in NWA history. They are real nobodies and a lot of the guys who have been with the promotion for a while feel cheated that these guys have top spots with the promotion...The USWA recently lost their time spot on KTVT in Dallas to the WWF. The USWA has been on that station since the beginning of time, but Vince got them bumped in a second. Rumor has it that the station itself banned the organization because of the distasteful violence against women angle, with TESSA. TESSA, by the way, has apparently left the wrestling world to pursue a career in nursing...TERRY "BAM BAM" GORDY collapsed in Japan and was in coma for nine hours. It appears that GORDY took a large amount of pain medication and then had a few drinks. See, drugs and alcohol certainly don't mix...JERRY LAWLER'S son, KEVIN, has been wrestling for a few independents in Tennessee. Look for KEVIN'S debut in the USWA soon...The feud between MANNY FERNANDEZ and WAHOO MCDANIEL is still not settled and they are taking their bloodfest to independent promotions throughout the country...Something funny, at a recent video convention held in Las Vegas, both the NWA and WWF were represented. STING was there representing the NWA and THE ULTIMATE WARRIOR was there for the WWF. There was a line of a few hundred people waiting to meet STING. It seems they thought STING was a rock star and when they learned he was a wrestler, almost half left the line...The entire wrestling world mourns the death of two legends. PAT O'CONNOR passed away in August from liver cancer. PAT was the NWA champ in the late sixties and many regard him ad one of the greatest wrestlers who ever lived. Perhaps his most historic and record breaking battles were against BUDDY ROGERS in Cominsky Park in Chicago...We also mourn the passing of legendary midget wrestler, LITTLE BEAVER. He will certainly be missed...JACKIE FULTON, younger brother of BOBBY has shown a great deal of improvement in the ring. His matches against THE NASTY BOYS have been great...In Japan, the scene revolves around wrestler/promoter ATSUSHI ONITA. ONITA recently wrestled TARZAN GOTO in a very unusual match. There were no ring ropes, but an electrified fence that sparked and threw flames any time one of the wrestlers hit it. As if that wasn't risky enough, ONITA recently went to Puerto Rico where he got into a fist fight with JOSE GONZALES (THE INVADER), the same man who was accused of murdering BRUISER BRODY. Guess ONITA doesn't value his life that much!..Fans in the New York area can tune in every Sunday morning from 10-12pm on WBAB radio (AM 1240) for the most insightful talk show in the area. Talk wrestling with host JOE AREZZI. Be sure to tell him the EYE sent ya! JOHN AREZZI, by the way, recently promoted a phenomenally successful wrestling fans convention in New York. Guests who were there included STING, BRUNO SAMMARTINO, RICKY STEAMBOAT, TERRY FUNK, PAUL E. DANGEROUSLY and CACTUS JACK. AREZZI hopes to hold similar functions in different cities all over the country. Tentative dates are now being booked for Amarillo, Texas, where a FUNK family tribute will take place and St. Louis, with special guest LOU THESZ...Well, guess that's it for now. This is THE PHANTOM signing off.

LARRY CAMERON

A MAN WITH A LETHAL MISSION

BY HOWARD FEINTUCH PHOTOS BY JUSTIN ROSANIO

When fans talk about the athletes who will rule the wrestling world in years to come, the big name stars immediately come to mind. Sure, Lex Luger, Sting and the Ultimate Warrior will remain household names, but if "Lethal" Larry Cameron has any say in the matter, his name will also be in lights in just a few years.

Canadian followers of Stampede Wrestling are most familiar with Cameron. He wreaked havoc in that promotion and nimbly stepped over the fallen bodies of his foes. Cameron was a feared rulebreaker, who took brutality and sadism to the extremes. Now, he's ready to take on the rest of the wrestling world, and in order to help his opponents get the inside scoop on this wild man, let's take a look at his background.

Prior to becoming a professional wrestler, Larry Cameron played pro football for a while with both the CFL and NFL respectively. He was also a bodybuilder and captured the title of Mr. Minnesota in 1985. Cameron soon realized that while bodybuilding was rewarding, he wanted more. Thus, Larry turned his interests to pro wrestling. "I always thought I could be a wrestler, the Lethal One stated. "One day a friend of mine introduced me to Eddie Sharkey. Well, Sharkey was impressed with what he saw and he decided to train me and the rest, as they say, is history!" When Sharkey decided to help out Cameron, it was definite boost for the young athlete. Sharkey, a legendary trainer who is based in Minnesota, has trained several top names in the business including The Legion of Doom, Rick Rude and Rick Steiner.

Diamond Dallas Page gives Larry a word of advice.

Ed Sharkey's school, he began wrestling for Pro Wrestling America. He made his debut in 1986 in Fridley, Minnesota, where he squared off against Johnny Love. Larry Cameron became known for his aggressive style and quickly rose to prominence within the organization. In 1987, he defeated Ricky Rice for the PWA heavyweight title. As champ, Cameron defended the gold against such notable challengers as Tom Zenk, Johnny Love and Tommy Jammer. However, no man was able to strip Larry of the title, he simply vacated it in 1988 when he decided it was time to move on to greener pastures.

Larry's next stop was in the Stampede promotion in Canada. It was here where he career really took off, and he finally began to get the recognition he deserved. Larry quickly established himself as the premiere rulebreaker in the organization. He continued to bully opponents and in November of 1988, he defeated Davey Boy Smith for the prestigious North American Heavyweight title. Cameron feuded with many top grapplers during his tenure in Stampede, but he claims his toughest adversaries were Owen hart and Davey Boy Smith. "Owen was tough because of his athletic ability, and Davey Boy's brute strength was tough to overcome, but hey, I managed," Cameron boasted.

Currently, Cameron is a force to be reckoned with in the IWA.

Soon though, it was time to move on once again. "Stu Hart decided he wasn't going to run Stampede anymore, and basically there was no work up there," Cameron explained. "They had promoters running one or two shows a week, but nothing serious, so I decided to vacate my North American title and look for more serious competition."

Larry decided it was time for the world to see what he was capable of, so he made some appearances in Japan. While there, Cameron found a more physical and tougher style of wrestling than he was accustomed to in North America. The versatile Larry Cameron was able to adapt and learned quite a bit in his matches against Mr. Saito, Riki Chosu, Hashimoto and Gartari.

Cameron is currently back in the States and is freelancing on the independent circuit. Officials from all the various promotions are quite pleased to get such a talented athlete on their rosters. The former champion now does battle against a variety of opponents, ranging from the popular "Super Chief" Charlie Norris to the bizarre Teijo Khan. Larry especially enjoys his time spent with the IWA, based in Sarasota, Florida. The IWA has been especially generous in giving Cameron a chance to show off his awesome talents against such stars like Kevin Von Erich, Derrick Dukes and Moondog Spot.

Larry Cameron has proven time and time again that he is a valuable commodity in the wrestling business. So, when will he make the jump to the so-called "major leagues", either the WWF or the NWA? Sometime ago there was a rumor circulating that Cameron would be brought into the NWA as a replacement member for a disgruntled Doom member. However, thankfully, that never took place. Larry Cameron needs to be brought in on his own strengths. He would not have been used to his his potential as a tag team wrestler because he flourishes in singles competition.

Wherever he goes in the near future, one thing is certain. Larry Cameron is ready for superstardom. Sooner or later his talents will be unleashed and fans will be amazed at the reign of terror he plans for whomever stands in his way!

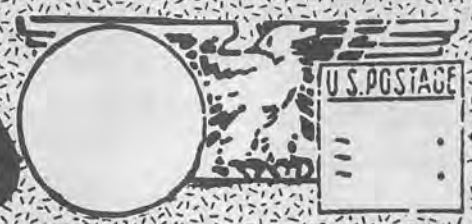
LETTERS TO THE EDITOR



SEND ALL LETTERS TO: WRESTLING EYE JEMS INC. P.O. BOX 138 MARLBORO, N.J. 07746 ATT: EDITOR

Dear WRESTLING EYE,

I agree with Sheila Hoard (Sept 1990 issue) that the Rockers are very much underestimated. After watching SUMMER SLAM, I know that Marty Jannetty deserves a lot more respect than what he gets! He did a fantastic job against Power & Glory (Hercules and Paul Roma) all by himself. Poor Shawn Michaels was making the effort, but being bullied and kicked repeatedly in his bad knee was just too much for him. Come on people, look at the true talent, wrestling strength and endurance of the Rockers!

As for Roddy Piper, get back in the ring where you belong and back up that big mouth of yours!!!

Teresa McAllister
Keokuk, Ia

Dear WRESTLING EYE,

I want to inform all the readers of WRESTLING EYE about a new and exciting promotion. For a long time now, I've had to watch the WWF arena show, but then a miracle happened. Colorado has its own promotion now, the RMWA, (Rocky Mountain Wrestling Association). They have a talent roster that is very impressive, regulars here are The Predator, Randy Rhodes, "Too Cool" Scorpio and The Rage. Names like Steve Regal and Barry 'O compete here also.

I've enjoyed the coverage of the many independent federations your magazine has uncovered over the years, and bet that the thousands of fans would enjoy seeing this exciting group as much as I would in a future issue.

Boyce Johansen
Arvada, Co

Dear WRESTLING EYE,

I was very sorry to hear Superstar Billy Graham's health problems and would like to take this opportunity to wish him well. It might sound corny but the Superstar was a strong and positive role model for me when I was growing up. It's obvious that The Superstar had a tremendous influence on many of today's top wrestling stars as well. Men like Hulk Hogan, Sting, Ultimate Warrior, Jesse "the Body" Ventura, Lex Luger and Austin Idol are all great athletes but they are just pale imitations of the former WWF Champ. The Superstar's muscular physique, unparalleled charisma and colorful ring attire revolutionized the look of professional wrestling. Without him, there probably never would have been a Hulk Hogan. Any way you look at it, Superstar Graham is an all time great. I hope he knows that serious wrestling fans will always appreciate all he has sacrificed for the sport.

Romeyn Tobin
Beale, AFB, Ca

Dear WRESTLING EYE,

I would like to congratulate you on a brilliant magazine. The color photos and exclusive articles places it way above certain other wrestling magazines. It's not biased towards one federation and gives the reader full coverage of major and minor leagues. Even if I cannot watch them all over here, I keep up with the ratings and the feuds. I'm from England and through your pen-pal column (the only one I have seen in a wrestling magazine) I have found an American friend who shares my interests.

Through your magazine, I would like to make a plea to the NWA: please persuade the British Television Companies to show major events because at the moment, all we receive is a one hour a week show which does not give any highlights or comments. Also, when the WWF came to London last year, they promised they would be back very soon. Well, a full year has now passed and there is still no news.

Daniel Nettleton
Kent, England

Dear WRESTLING EYE,

I want to start out by saying your magazine is the greatest. I look forward to reading it every month. "Phantom of the Ring" is my favorite department. Keep up the good work!

I am writing to you because lately when I'm watching the Ultimate Warrior wrestle, it looks like a different person. It is rumored that the Warrior died due to steroid use and that the WWF replaced him. Is this true?

Joseph Puccio
Richmond Hill,NY

EDITORS NOTE: There's absolutely no truth to these rumors. The original Warrior is alive and well and still wrestling for the WWF.

Dear WRESTLING EYE,

I am writing in response to a recent letter I read by Cyndy Biberost. I agree with every single word she said. Shawn Michaels and Marty Jannetty are incredible wrestlers. In fact, "incredible" doesn't even partly cover how much admiration I have for the Rockers.

I am an English fan so I do not get to see all the Rockers matches but I have been a loyal fan for over a year now. I have seen AWA, NWA and all other WWF tag teams and I can truly say there is no other tag team I enjoy watching as much as Shawn and Marty

Now I'd just like to send a message to the Rockers: you're the best!!!

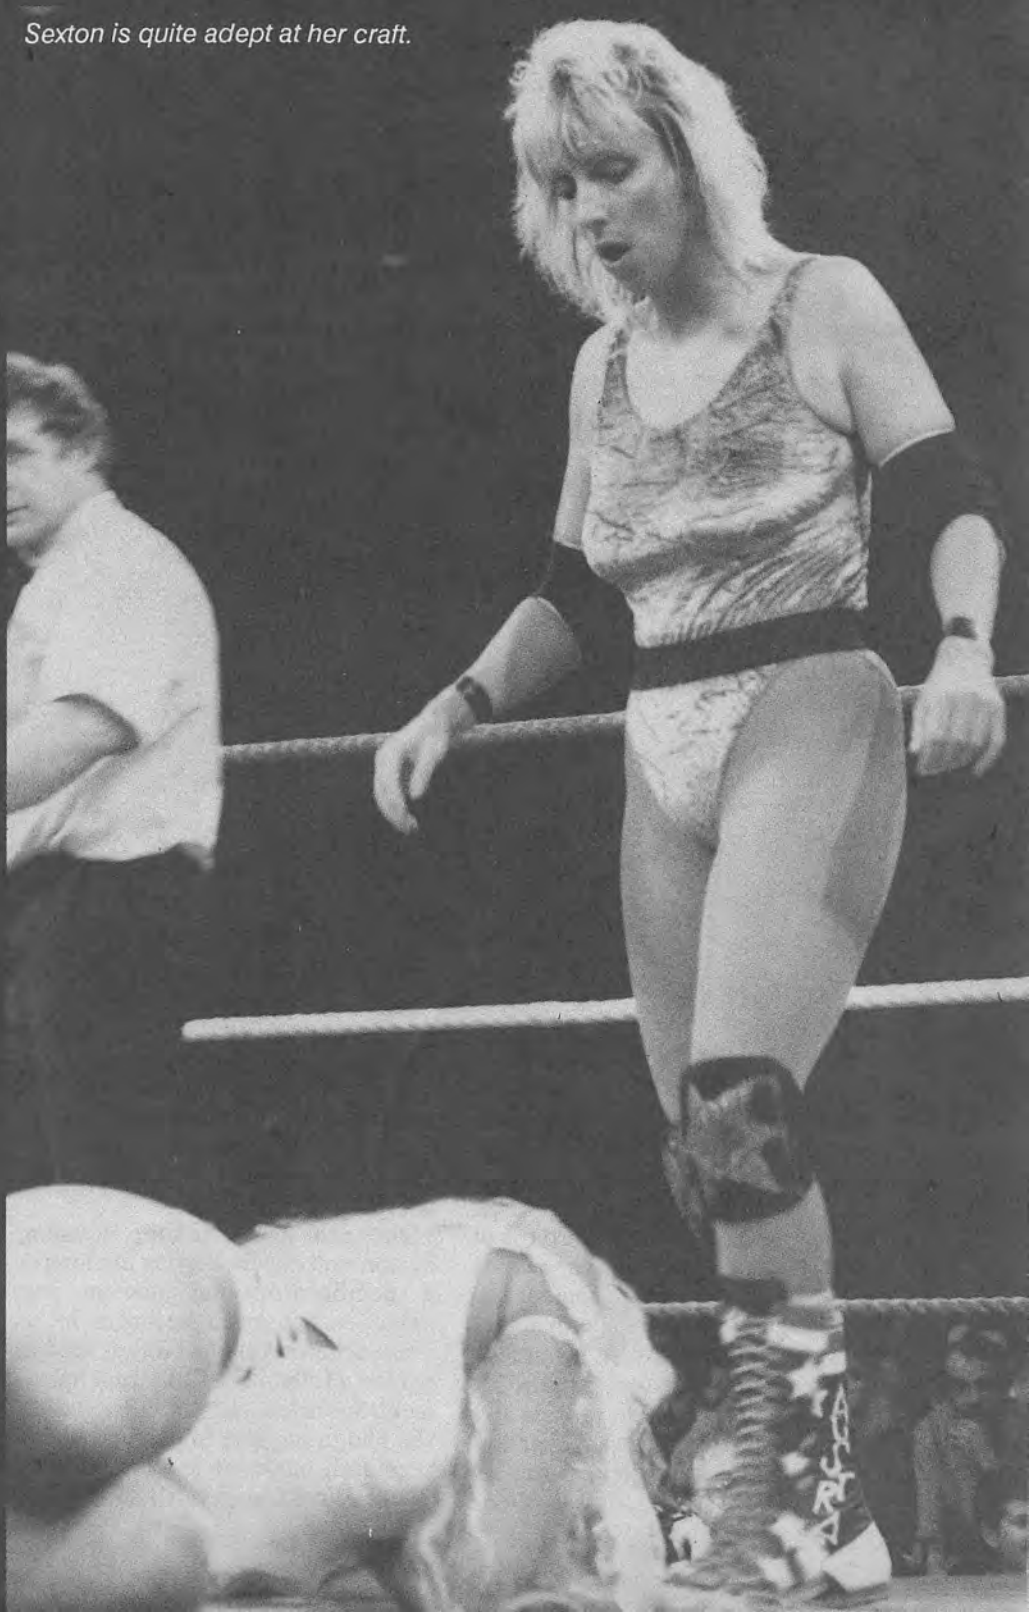
SUSAN SEXTON

AIN'T NO STOPPING HER NOW!

BY DON LAIBLE

Just as a finely tuned, precisioned Swiss watch performs in a class of its own, so does Ladies Wrestling Champion, Susan Sexton. Just as dependable in between the ring ropes as any object the famous jewelers can put on a wrist, the current Ladies Professional Wrestling Association's top performer continues her quest for glory. Sexton keeps her enthusiasm level up by continuously revamping her personal goals. New challengers in new settings are what this Australian strives for. She's been around wrestling rings for nearly two decades and has not shown any signs of slowing down. Work, work, work. There's no time for second guessing any previous maneuvers implemented during matches. The future can be shaped and that's where Susan Sexton is concentrating all her energies.

Sexton holds the Ladies Professional Wrestling Association championship, but is that enough to satisfy her thirst for total domination of her craft? Most mat experts don't believe it is. Just like a submarine at war time, Susan searches and destroys all wa1ks of competition who challenge her. With a break in the LPWA schedule, the Orient has been the Aussie's latest stomping grounds where she has successfully defended her title belt. Starting off her tour with a bang in Tokyo, Japan's Korakuen Hall, Sexton turned back the efforts of Harley Saito by using a Boston crab to score the submission victory. The specific mission for the LPWA champ while overseas was to strip the Women's Wrestling Association International belt from Eagle Sawai. Susan also teamed up with Devil Masami. Together in tag matches, they defeated the duo of Kazama and Shinobu Kanazawa, two of Japan's very best females athletes. Although Sexton was not successful in gaining the WWA International title she did wrestle Sawai to thirty minute time limit draws.



Sexton is quite adept at her craft.

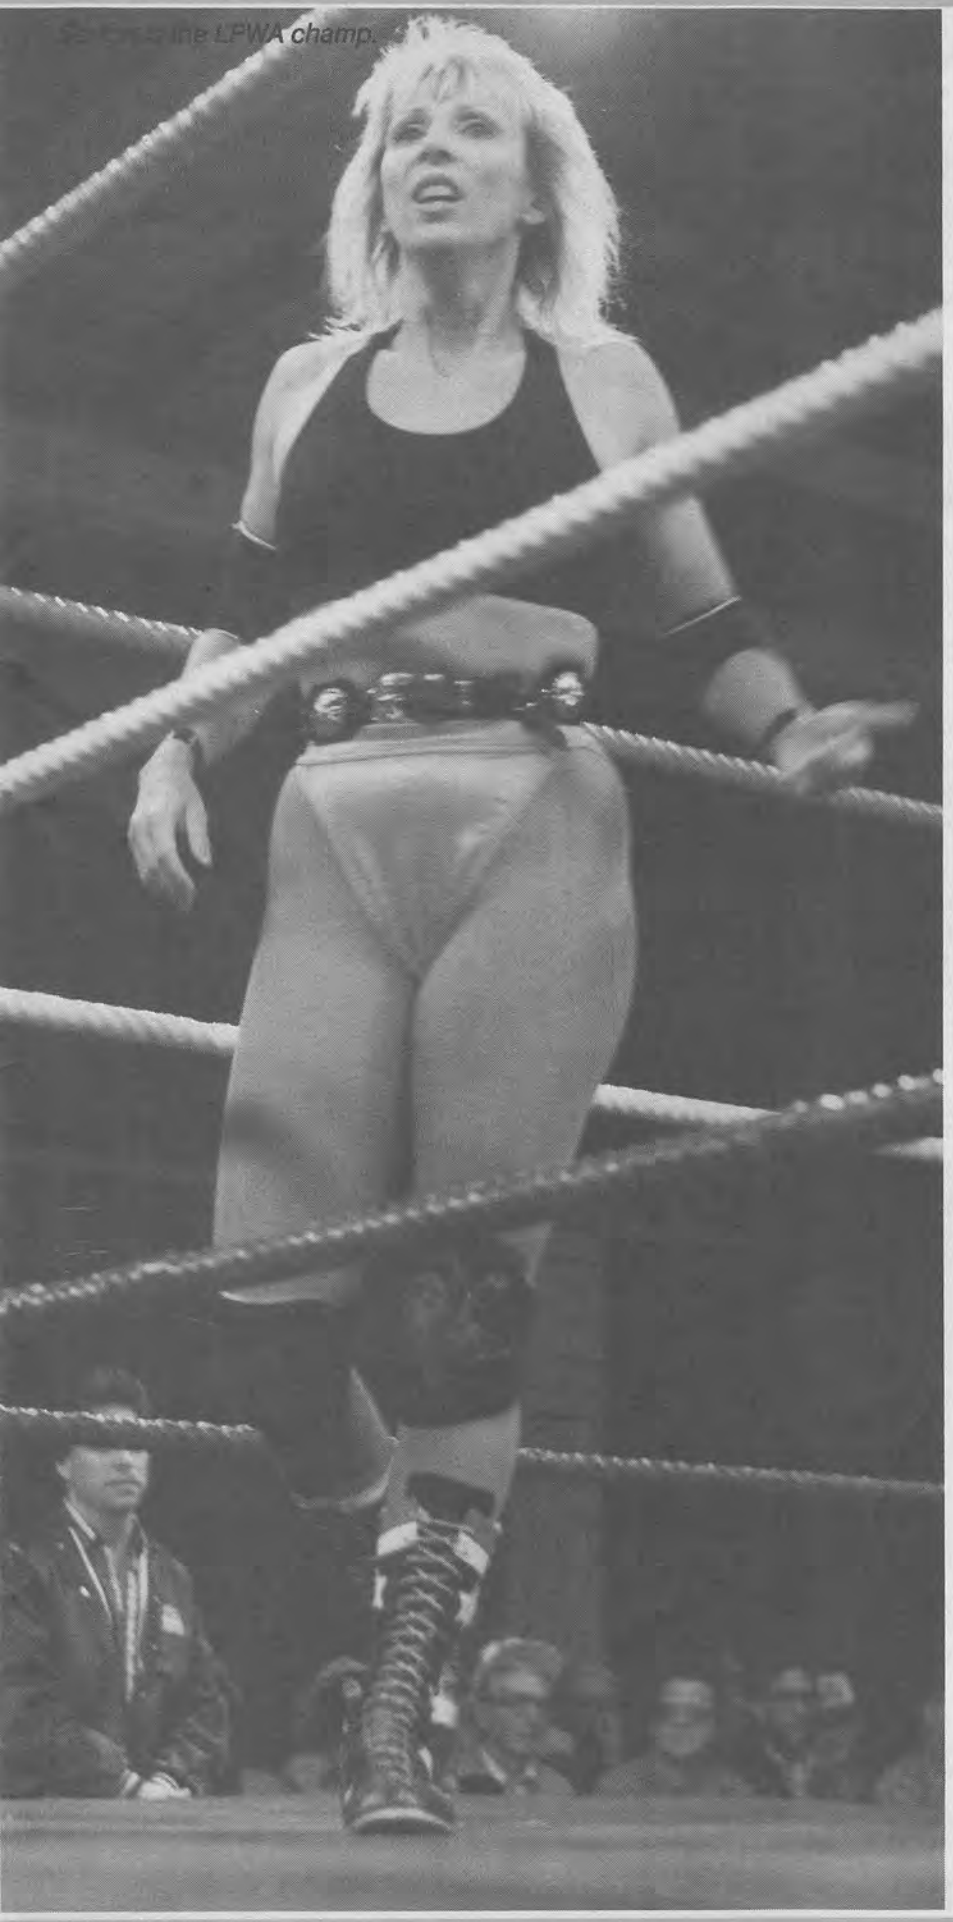
Sexton is in great shape.

When visiting new places, familiar faces are always a welcome addition. Susan was happy to have been accompanied by her close friend and protege Jan Flame on this tour. Regardless of the wrestling situation, it was reassuring for the champ to have someone to count on at all times. Besides her winning ways with the LPWA, it was also a combination of Sexton's impressive track record in Germany, Mexico and Engiand that landed her an invitation to test her skills with Japan's top attractions. Victories over Lola Gonzales in Mexico City and Rusty Blair in Yorkshire, England gained Susan instant international attention in the wrestling communities.

Due to the nature of her profession, Sexton isn't one for staying too long in a specific area, but since her pro debut, she has stayed the longest in the United States. Comfortably nestled in a West Hollywood, California apartment, Susan loves her home but wishes she had more time to enjoy it. She is constantly on the go and the Western States Wrestling Association, which honors the LPWA championship, has just called upon Susan to put her belt on the line in its territorial boundaries - Arizona, Utah and California. Oddly enough, the WSWA recognizes Jan Flame as the top contender for the championship held by her mentor - Susan Sexton. The two athletes did agree to meet for one, and only one clash recently in San Marcos, California. Sexton at 5'"7", 130 pounds, and her opponent never strayed from the rules. They conducted themselves in fine fashion in between the ring ropes.



Personal feelings were put aside, and each dazzled her opponent with wrestling wizardry. After ten minutes of fast paced action, Susan caught Flame off balance with a backward sunset flip. This was all that was needed for the pin.

Sexton is pleased that the LPWA doesn't put a strangle hold on outside work opportunities. She uses the gold around her waist as bait to lure celebrated opponents who have thus far stayed clear of her on both the independent and LPWA circuits. Bambi, Despina Montages and Debbie Combs are among the first wave of challengers the champ hopes to lock up with by year's end.

Sexton credits Wendi Richter with teaching her how to be a fine champion. "Two years ago, my career was turning around. Wendi Richter was my opponent in Puerto Rico. Let me tell you, Wendi has been the toughest gal that I've ever come up against and that includes Moolah," she said. "During our match, I saw how hard Wendi worked on keeping her WWC title. She redefined the meaning of determination. Right then and there I wanted to be that hungry in the ring, to do whatever it took to win and hold a recognized championship. Since then, there isn't anything I'm ashamed to do on the mat. The LPWA came into my life at the right time and I intend to be their champion for many years." Sheeba - Queen of the Desert is by far the most improved wrestler in the LPWA and she has the potential to be a champion, but first she must get past Misty Blue and Big Mo, in order to get a shot at Sexton. When asked, who her most formidable opponent would be, Sexton didn't even hesitate; Madusa Miceli. "Madusa and me have got a score to settle since the days when she reigned as AWA champ. I'm just itching to get my hands on her and can't wait for her to return from Japan. Hopefully, pressure from the fans and the LPWA itself will coax Madusa into a rematch. If that does happen, believe me, I'm ready!"

Although Susan does not wrestle in her homeland, Australia, fans cheer her and wish her nothing both the best. They know that their hometown girl has made quite a name for herself and will stop at nothing in order to retain her title. Now that's what being a true champion is all about.
